U.S. Program.MOSCOW, Feb. 13 (AP)—A 1418-pound Soviet space station hurtles toward a mid-May rendezvous with the planet Venus today after a spectacular piggyback launching the United States does not expect to achieve for another 18 to 24 months.The space traveler carrying a banner emblazoned with the Soviet coat of arms was launched yesterday from a sputnik and should reach the area of Venus when the earth's sister planet will be about 26,000,000 miles away, the Russians said.(Although the Soviet announcement referred variously to it as a space ship and "interplanetary station," the vehicle apparently was a rocket carrying a radio transmitter and possibly other equipment.)The latest Soviet space shot-second in eight days—was aimed at investigating conditions on and around the planet, whose perpetual mantle of clouds has made it a mystery to scientists.The aim is either to hit Venus or to have the ship pass close enough to send back detailed studies, Victor Bazykin, director of the Moscow planetarium, told reporters today. He said it was far from certain that the ship will hit the planet.

Has Transmitter.

The space ship has a radio transmitter believed capable of sending messages across millions of miles of space, but Bazykin said it has not been announced whether the vehicle carries equipment to relay photographs back to earth. He declined to speculate on this.At the time he talked with reporters, Bazykin said the space vehicle was considerably less than a million kilometers (621,000 miles) from the earth.Scientists and officials hailed the Venus shot as the greatest space feat since Russia orbited its first Sputnik three years ago.
It adds to the Soviet Union's other claimed accomplishments, which include hitting the moon with a rocket, photographing the far side of the moon and orbiting the sun.(The White House issued a terse statement that President Kennedy had been advised of the rocket firing and that the United States had been tracking it ever since. A Defense Department spokesman said the Pentagon knew about the firing before Russia announced it Sunday.(Dr. Hugh Dryden, deputy administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said in Washington the United States is at least 1½ to 2 years from achieving the kind of several-stage launching of such a large object reported by the Russians. But he added that he

Path to Venus

VENUS, TARGET OF SOVIET SPACE SHIP, MAY BE SEEN EASILY BY ST. LOUISANSST. LOUISANS interested in viewing the planet Venus may find it easily by looking in the southwestern area of the sky any time between twilight and about 10 p.m., Donald Zahner, director of the St. Louis Moonwatch Station, said today.Venus is presently the "evening star," and is the brightest object in the sky, he said.
Zahner said Venus will disappear below the horizon in the middle of April and will reappear in the eastern sky about a week later as the "morning star." It will be at its brightest about May, when the Russian sputnik is expected to reach it, he said.DEAD MAIL YIELDS $571,772 IN YEAR
FOR U.S. TREASURYWASHINGTON, Feb. 13 (AP)— Letters and parcels so improperly addressed or wrapped that they ended up in the dead mail pile brought the Government $571,772 in the fiscal year that ended last June 30, Postmaster General J. Edward Day said yesterday.Dead letters yielded $180,056 to the United States, but postal employees were able to restore $118,648 to the rightful owners.
Money taken from dead letters goes into the United Treasury if it is not reclaimed within one year.The dead letter department handled 21,969,725 letters in the last fiscal year, compared with 21,487,119 in the previous year.
Of the 21,969,725 a total of 20-045,408—or 91 per cent—was destroyed because there was no adequate clue to the owner.
Dead parcels brought the Post Office Department $391,716. This came from auctioning 696,269 items in dead parcel centers in 15 major cities. This money also goes to the United States Treasury. In 1959, the auction of 642,935 dead parcels brought $349,374.

REDS EASY ON MOONSHINERS

MOSCOW, Feb. 13 (AP)— Police in the Yaroslavl region northeast of Moscow got orders to go easy on moonshiners and prosecutions dropped from 300 in 1958 to 20 last year, the newspaper Literature and Life said yesterday. Of the 20, only one was punished.Without saying what officials ordered this, the newspaper demanded serious action against illicit stills. Liquor is heavily taxed in the Soviet Union and moonshining is an extensive industry in some areas.Maharajah Too Wasteful; India

KENNEDY SAYS
14,000,000 HAVE URGENT NEED OF MEDICAL AIDSends Congress His Proposal for Insuring Health of Elderly — 'Humiliating Means Test' Avoided.By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.WASHINGTON, Feb. 13—President Kennedy told Congress today that the need of 14,000,000 persons past 65 years of age for health insurance under the social security system is urgent.With letters to Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson and Speaker
Sam Rayburn, the Chief Executive sent a 70-page proposed bill which, if adopted by Congress, would replace the federal-state legislation enacted last year.
Attached to the letters was a letter to the President from Abraham Ribicoff, Secretary of the Health, Education and Welfare Department, who would administer the new law.The proposed legislation is certain to encounter formidable opposition in Congress from Republicans, conservative Democrats and lobbyists for the American Medical Association and business men.

Social Security Tax Rise.

The proposed legislation, which would become effective Oct. 1, 1962, would be financed primarily by increasing the social security payments by one-fourth of 1 per cent for both employers and employees and by three-eighths of 1 per cent for self-employed persons, beginning with 1963. The bill would raise the taxable earnings base from $4800 to $5000 a year, beginning with 1962. The total medical cost was estimated at $1,500,000,000.The proposed bill, one of the five given the highest priority by President Kennedy, carries out a campaign pledge to give medical aid to the elderly without "any humiliating means tests," as he phrased it today in his letters. During the campaign he denounced the federal-state law for requiring what he called a "poverty oath."The draft bill covers persons who are presently under the social security system and the railroad retirement law. The benefits would cover both patients in hospitals and those receiving skilled nursing home services, effective for the latter July 1, 1963.In a summary of the bill, the White House said:
"At least one member in every fifth aged couple entitled to benefits was in a hospital sometime during a year, according to a recent survey of OASI beneficiaries. For half of these couples, the total medical bills incurred amounted to over $700 —more than the cost of a modest food budget for the entire year. Only 57 per cent of the couples having a hospital stay were able to meet all their medical bills by themselves.""Since 1957, the date of the survey, medical care prices have gone up by 14 per cent, and hospital rates by 20 per cent, so that total medical bills today for those requiring hospitalization would be noticeably higher, yet current income figures still show as many as 55 per cent of the persons 65 and over having less than $1000 cash income a year."

Go Offener, Stay Longer.

"Aged people go to the hospital more often than younger people and stay longer. As a result, the number of days spent in a general hospital is between two and three times as large.
On the average, for persons 65 and over as for younger persons (1778 days per 1000 population compared to 764). Yet only 46 per cent of the aged have hospitalization insurance, as compared to about 70 per cent of younger persons. In addition, many of the insurance policies available to the aged offer small

PRESIDENT SAYS

INCENTIVE PLANPlant Expansion Is Its

ness Are Allies.WASHINGTON, Feb. 13 (AP)— President Kennedy said today he will propose a new tax incentive plan for businesses to expand their normal investment in plant and equipment.The President said his proposal will be submitted to Congress within the next few weeks.
But he gave no details of the plan in a speech before the National Industrial Conference Board, Inc., an independent and non-profit institution for business and industrial fact-finding. Mr.
Kennedy spoke at the luncheon meeting shortly after returning from a weekend at his country estate in Middleburg, Va.

Business, Government Allies.

President Kennedy said business and the Federal Government, far from being natural enemies, are necessary allies.
For example, he said, the 1960 drop in expected corporate profits of some six or seven billion dollars also caused a loss in federal revenues of at least three billions.The President said this tax loss was enough to pay the federal share of all anti-recession, health, and education proposals for the next fiscal year and still have enough left over to start closing what he said the Democrats used to call "the missile gap."This brought a laugh from his audience, because of the recent row over whether the Democrats have now changed their mind about there being a missile gap.

No Discrimination Pledged.

On behalf of his associates in the Cabinet, Mr. Kennedy said, he wanted to be very precise:
"We will not discriminate for or against any segment of our society, or any segment of the business community. We are vigorously opposed to corruption

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Feb.

13—The Security Council adjourned its debate on the Congo today after news of the death of Patrice Lumumba, deposed Congolese premier, was received.The motion to adjourn was offered by the United Arab Republic after having been suggested in the Council by the Soviet Union. It was supported by all Council members except Liberia.Although the Council meeting lasted less than an hour, it was marked by an atmosphere of gravity. The chief United States delegate, Adlai E. Stevenson, told the Council that President Kennedy had made a public statement expressing shock at Lumumba's death.Valerian Zorin, chief Soviet delegate, renewed his attacks on Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold and his administration of the U.N. effort in the Congo.

Confidence Gone.

The death of Lumumba, Zorin said, occurred "under the blue flag of the United Nations." As a result, the Soviet delegate added, "We have not the slightest confidence in the Secretary General or his staff."Zorin and other delegates called for adjournment until Wednesday to enable diplomats to consult their home governments. The death of Lumumba, it was agreed, created a new situation.
As the meeting opened, Hammarskjold made a statement proposing that the latest report

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13—The uses of the President's press conference are expanding with live television. One reporter, recently assigned to Washington and wanting to let acquaintances around the country know he had moved, reports he decided that the quickest way would be to get himself televised in the President's presence.Accordingly he attended the second live television conference with the explicit plan of appearing on camera. Arriving early, he studied the camera locations.
The likeliest spot from which to get in the picture, he conclud-ed, would be near someone who would ask a question, preferably a long question that would give extended exposure.He chose Edward Morgan of the American Broadcasting Co., figuring that on the basis of past performance Morgan would have the day's longest question. Then he cannily seated himself behind and slightly to one side of his subject so that he would not be observed when Morgan stood.His plan was flawless. Within the next two days he heard from friends in three states reporting their surprise to see him

Threat of Civil War in Congo.ELISABETHVILLE, Katanga, Feb. 13 (AP)—Former Premier Patrice Lumumba is dead, the Katanga government announced today, and the African villagers who killed him have received a reward of $8000.The Interior Ministry of this secessionist province declared
The Congo's deposed premier was "massacred yesterday morning" along with two aids said to have fled with him three days earlier.Godefroid Munongo, the interior minister, told reporters:"I will speak frankly. If people accused us of killing Lumumba, I will reply: 'Prove it.'"The effect of the killings was to bring the long-brewing Congo situation to a new crisis holding the threat of civil war. It came as Katanga was flexing its military muscles with a drive which brought a United Nations warning.

Explanation of Secrecy.

The Interior Minister refused to name the village where Lu-mumba and two of his associates died."We do not want the Africans of the tribe which killed Lu-mumba to be identified because they might be the subject of eventual reprisals by Lumumbists," said Munongo."We cannot honestly blame these people because they have rid the Congo, and the whole world, of a problem which certain people have exaggerated and a problem which menaced the existence of humanity.""This village will be given the total of 400,000 francs ($8000) promised by the Katanga cabinet for the capture of the three men, and I shall say no more about it."Munongo called Lumumba a criminal responsible for tens of thousands of deaths in Kasai and Katanga provinces, and insisted the handling of the case was a local matter for provincial authorities.

45 Miles From Escape Point.

The former Premier and his aids escaped last Thursday from a farmhouse, where they had been held prisoner, the Katanga government had said.The place of their death was not far from the spot where their escape car had been found. Munongo said. This spot previously was described as 45 miles from the farmhouse. This in turn, was 220 miles west of Elisabethville.(United Press International gave the name of the village near where the three had been held as Mungulunga.)The death of the 35-year-old Lumumba is bound to have widespread repercussions in the Congo, where tribal rivalries are fierce.He became premier when The Congo attained independence from Belgium last June 30. Soon Soviet technicians and equipment were flowing into the Congo, along with a United Nations peace force of 20,000 men which Lumumba at first welcomed, then repudiated.

Backers Hold Vast Area.

In September, President Joseph Kasavubu, after weeks of uncertainty, threw Lumumba out of office and sent him to jail for trial on charges of crimes against the nation.Even in detention Lumumba made his weight felt, and at the time of his death his followers were in control of about a third of the Congo.Some U.N. officials had expressed belief the Katanga government's report of Lumumba's escape was a story designed to cover up his death.Interior Minister Munongo insisted African villagers killed Lumumba, along with two associates, Maurice Mpolo and Joseph Okito just outside their village by means he did not disclose.

GOLDBERG GETS OK TO MAKE NEW TRIPS TO AREAS HIT BY RECESSION

Labor Secretary Will Visit W. Virginia, Massachusetts, Minnesota to Check Conditions, Offer Help.

By EDWARD F. WOODS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13—Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg has a go-ahead signal from President Kennedy today for a new series of trips to recession-ridden areas of the nation to assure business and labor alike that the Administration is going to take whatever steps are necessary to put the country back to work.

Goldberg returned to Washington last night after a first-hand check of unemployment and business downturns in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

After a telephone talk with the President yesterday from Pittsburgh, the Secretary was ready to announce that he will travel in the near future to West Virginia, Massachusetts and Minnesota for a close look at conditions and to carry the message that help is on the way.

Visited Seven Cities.

In his dawn-to-midnight weekend swing, which began Friday morning at Chicago, Goldberg traveled 2300 miles, visited seven cities, interviewed the unemployed in 12 federal employment offices and appeared at six hastily scheduled but crowded town hall-type meetings of labor and business groups.

Goldberg said repeatedly during his trip that the excursion was non-political, but the emphasis of his discussions with the various groups was on President Kennedy's anti-recession program, embracing immediate and extended aid to the jobless, a higher minimum wage law (to be achieved in two steps, $1.15 now and $1.25 in two years), a multi-billion-dollar rebuilding program for depressed areas and tax concessions to business to encourage plant modernization to make American industry more competitive in the world market.

In all of the cities Goldberg visited—Chicago, Gary and South Bend, Ind., Detroit and Lansing, Mich., Columbus, O., and Pittsburgh—the hard-luck stories from workers and business men were similar.

Millions of jobless, Goldberg was told by union and community leaders, had been out of work for many months, their unemployment compensation benefits were exhausted and they were reduced to going on public relief. Many were trying to hold families together on as little as $3 a week. In some cases, fathers were leaving home in order to qualify children for a federal aid program intended to sustain minors who are deserted by the family breadwinner.

Business men almost unanimously complained of slack sales at the retail level. Steel, automobile, rubber and other industrial spokesmen reported unsold inventories which they are unable to move.

In some areas, business men urged Goldberg to try to hasten the flow of government contracts for roads and other public works to create demand for products.

Jobs, not a Dole.

The demand of labor leaders and the unemployed was for jobs, not a Dole.

To all of the complainants, Goldberg offered encouragement that what he termed the "do-something" Kennedy Administration was busy with a vast anti-recession program but that its success would require bi-partisan support in Congress and the understanding and co-operation of business and labor groups at the local and state levels.

Goldberg's outline of economic problems and the steps the Kennedy Administration is taking to meet them was stated in what he described repeatedly as frankness and candor. He reminded his audiences that frankness and candor should not be confused with despair. He stated that the Kennedy Administration is confident that the problems can be licked. He said also that if the programs now on the boards do not provide the solution other approaches will be undertaken.

"We will put industry back to work and the people back to work," Goldberg said.

Goldberg said the Administration was taking a "hard-headed" line in attacking the recession on a long-range basis but that its immediate aims, such as extended unemployment benefits, were dictated by the Administration's "heart."

About one-third of the 5,400,000 unemployed are in the five states Goldberg visited over the weekend. He said that the economic problems of these areas now are compounded because these sectors, and similar trouble spots all across the country, never fully recovered from the 1958 recession.

He pledged that if Congress passes the President's bill to ex-

4 More Electrical Executives Begin 30-Day Sentences for Price Fixing

High-Salaried Men Go to Norristown, Pa.—Two Others Already There.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., Feb. 13 (AP)—Four high-salaried electrical firm executives began serving 30-day jail terms today for their conspiracy in the nation's biggest federal anti-trust case.

Handcuffed in pairs, they entered the Montgomery county prison in Norristown, 20 miles north of Philadelphia.

William S. Ginn, 45 years old, a $135,000-a-year General Electric Co. vice president from Schenectady, N. Y., frowned as he walked past a battery of photographers outside the prison and snapped, "get a good shot, boys."

Ginn was handcuffed to Lewis J. Burger, 48, of Fort Wayne, Ind., a G.E. division manager. Also handcuffed together were Edwin R. Jung (pronounced "Young"), 58, vice president of Clark Controller Co., Cleveland, and George E. Burens, a G.E. vice president who lives in Cleveland but who had been on assignment in Louisville, Ky.

The four surrendered today to United States Marshal William O'Brien at the federal building in Philadelphia and were fingerprinted. Then they were put in two cars for the 45-minute ride.

Tomorrow the new prisoners will be issued the blue denim prison garb and take physical examinations. Then they will join in the prison routine two others involved in the conspiracy who began their 30-day terms last Friday.

If the men do not want to work, they do not have to. Warden Andrew White said that if they wanted, the men could do clerical jobs.

A seventh man, John Marvin Cook, 54, Fox Point, Wis., was granted a week delay in his starting jail term because of his daughter's engagement party this week. He is marketing vice president of Cutler-Hammer, Inc., Milwaukee.

The two Westinghouse Electric Corp. executives already in prison are John H. Chiles Jr., 57, Sharon, Pa., vice president of the transformer division, and Charles L. Mauntel, 60, Drexel Hill, Pa., sales manager of the steam turbine division.

The seven men, who are said to earn from $25,000 to $135,000 apiece annually, will occupy separate cells in the Montgomery county prison. (In Pittsburgh, Westinghouse said the salaries of Chiles and Mauntel would be continued during their terms. Westinghouse did not reveal tend unemployment benefits for an additional 13 weeks to about 3,500,000 workers who have exhausted or will exhaust their benefits in the coming months, federal funds to pick up the tab for the states will be on the way within two weeks after Congress acts.

Goldberg expects to see Mr. Kennedy tomorrow for a comprehensive report in his findings. He said he would suggest that the President telegraph state governments and school board heads urging them to speed up building plans already in the works. The President wired mayors across the country last week urging them to accelerate public works projects for which federal funds have been made available.

By the Associated Press.

The Republican national committee accused Goldberg today of playing politics with the unemployment problem. An article in the committee's official publication, Battle Line, described as a political junkie the five-state swing Goldberg completed yesterday. The committee complained because, it said, Republicans were excluded from participation.

Americans for Democratic Action said yesterday that Mr. Kennedy's economic program would not move fast enough "to get the country out of the recession quickly and fully" or sustain full employment and a satisfactory rate of economic growth.

A.D.A. called for an immediate tax cut of $100 for each taxpayer. Its statement said the country cannot wait until April, the time the Kennedy Administration has indicated it will take a look at the possibility of a tax cut.

A.D.A. called also for: (1) an increase in the amount as well as in the duration of unemployment benefits; (2) a substantial increase in the flow of funds into housing; (3) expansion and acceleration of federal projects; and (4) expanded coverage of the minimum wage law.

DOUGLAS CALLS FOR ACCEPTANCE OF NEW WAVE OF MIGRANTS

Urges in Talk Here That Classes Be Formed to Help Negroes, Mountaineers Adjust to City Life.

The Negro, the badly educated white Ozark mountaineer, the Mexican and the Puerto Rican are repeating the history of the immigrant Irish, Germans, Jews, Italians and Greeks of a century ago in their impact upon American cities, United States Senator Paul Douglas (Dem., Illinois), said last night.

Senator Douglas spoke on "The Effects of Population Movements on Metropolitan Areas" in Steinberg Hall on the Washington University campus. The talk was sponsored by the university's Civic Education Center.

To illustrate the impact of the immigration on St. Louis, Douglas cited statistics showing a 39.9 per cent increase in the city's non-white population in the last 10 years. In the same period, its white population decreased by 24 per cent, Douglas said.

Figures Cited. The non-white population reported by the 1960 census was 216,022, as compared with 154,448 in 1950. White population totaled 534,004 in the count last year, as against 702,348 in 1950, Douglas said.

In Chicago, he said, the non-white population increased by 64.4 per cent in the same period, while the white population dropped 12.8 per cent.

It was the city that attracted most of the immigrants of 100 years ago, just as it is the city that attracts the new wave of immigrants today, he said. The immigrants of a century ago were gradually absorbed into the main stream of American life and today are judged on the basis of their individual talents rather than their historic antecedents, he added.

'Saga of Americanism.'

"This is part of the glorious saga of true Americanism, and, despite the sneers of the snobish, it has been our cities which have done this tremendous job of cultural assimilation," Senator Douglas said. "With all their many faults, they have been cultural laboratories for the development of human brotherhood."

The task of the cities today is no different from that of 100 years ago, he went on. The same possibilities for growth are present in the Negro, the ill-nourished white mountaineers and those of Latin lineage from Mexico and Puerto Rico. The first need is for acceptance and recognition that they are basically similar to ourselves with the same basic needs, but burdened with more difficulties.

Unlike their counterparts of a century ago, the established classes are not absorbing the newcomers, but are abandoning the central city for the suburbs, he said.

"Our first great need, therefore, is for a spiritual acceptance of brotherhood by the well-to-do and the established. More people of this class should stay within the central city instead of fleeing to the suburbs at the advent of those with darker skins," he said.

Chicago Example. Senator Douglas noted that many white families in his own community of Hyde Park in Chicago had remained members of the community as Negroes moved in. Despite some trials and even tragedies, the vast majority feel it has been worthwhile and that their lives have been enriched by the experience, he said.

But the human spirit functions more effectively through institutions than at random and on an individual basis, he said, suggesting the following efforts:

"Let schools, settlements, churches and unions conduct friendly discussions and classes for the newcomers on how to get adjusted to city life—on personal hygiene and health, on what is expected of householders and tenants, on how to manage money. Classes in English and in the common yet basic skills of reading, writing and arithmetic are needed now as in the days of the rush of immigrants.

"Let the building and loan associations, the mutual savings banks and the FHA turn their gaze from the suburbs to the cities and be far more liberal in their loan policies toward those of the newer stocks who want to buy and improve homes."

Restoring Northwoods Water Service

Employees of St. Louis County Water Co. repairing water main break on Lillian avenue in Northwoods.

BREAK IN MAIN CUTS OFF WATER TO 100 FAMILIES

About 100 families in Northwoods were without water for eight hours yesterday after a 12-inch water main broke.

The break occurred along Lillian avenue west of Edgewood boulevard. Otto G. Gassmann, maintenance supervisor for the St. Louis County Water Co., said sudden temperature changes probably caused the rupture.

Water spurted 50 feet in the air and collected to depths of about one foot for a time. The break occurred near a vacant lot, and no houses were damaged.

A 48-inch main burst last Wednesday in north St. Louis, forcing several persons to evacuate their homes and causing an estimated $500,000 damage.

FUNERAL IN NASHVILLE FOR MISS MARY L. MEANS

Funeral services for Miss Mary L. Means, former St. Louis caterer, will be tomorrow in Nashville, Tenn., relatives here have learned. Burial also will be there.

Miss Means, 89 years old, died yesterday of infirmities of age in Nashville. With her late mother, Mrs. Charles Means, she operated the old Means Catering Co. at 3640 Washington avenue from about 1900 to 1930. A native of Nashville, Miss Means returned here about 30 years ago. The only survivors are several cousins living here.

CANDIDATE URGES CITY BUY LOT FOR USE AS PLAYGROUND

Floyd McBride, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Alderman of the Thirteenth ward, yesterday urged the city to buy a vacant lot near the Dunning School in South St. Louis for use as a municipal playground.

The property is scheduled for sale by the Board of Education Thursday. McBride said he has appealed to Comptroller John H. Poelker and Mrs. Edward G. Brungard, city director of parks and recreation, asking them to make funds available for purchase of the lot.

students according to ability and preparation.

More space and better facilities for recreation are needed. Effective committees on human relations can do much to erase the consciousness of racial and religious differences.

A halt must be called on the subdivision of the metropolitan area into a host of separate political entities, and cities must be allowed to expand to include the peripheral areas which now use their services but make little or no contribution in return.

And finally, a Federal Department of Urban Affairs must be created to deal with the fact that 112,000,000 Americans, or 62 per cent of the total population, now live in 235 metropolitan areas. "Such a department will in itself work no miracle, but it will enable a greater degree of co-operation to be carried out between the national government and the metropolitan areas," he said. "Such a co-operation should deal not merely with material things such as transportation, but also with people. For it is in the activities and relationships of people that the stuff of city life is formed."

WOMAN REPORTS BEING ASSAULTED

A 41-year-old married woman reported to police early yesterday that she was raped by a man, who forced his way into her automobile at a stop sign in North Twentieth street.

The woman said she was accosted by two men in a car when she was walking to a parking lot after leaving work at Beaumont and Locust streets shortly before midnight. She hurried to the parking lot and reported the incident to the watchman there. The watchman noted the color of the car, but was unable to obtain the license number.

Later, when driving north in Twentieth street, the woman said she made a major street stop. A Negro about 40 years old, jerked open the door of the car and stepped in. The woman offered him her purse, but he directed her to drive through an alley to a vacant lot, announcing his intentions to attack her, she said.

After the car was stopped the woman said she was forced, under threat of death, to remove part of her clothing. She was scratched in a brief struggle, and the attack followed, she reported. Before departing the man committed a second attack. The woman ran to a home in the 1700 block of O'Fallon street and called police. She was treated at City Hospital for hysteria and scratches.

A widow, 79 years old, reported to police yesterday that she was criminally attacked Saturday night in her west end home by a tall man, who was waiting in the kitchen when she returned from a store.

The assailant grabbed her, inflicted a cut over her left eye, the woman said. He had gained entrance to the home by cutting a screen, police discovered. The woman reported the attack after visiting a physician yesterday.

SCHOOL VAULT BROKEN INTO THIRD TIME IN TWO MONTHS

A walk-in vault at Hazelwood Senior High School, 1863 United States Highway 66, St. Louis county, was broken into for the third time in two months yesterday, but apparently nothing was taken, police said.

Burglars entered the school by breaking a window in a first-floor classroom. A hole five inches wide was punched through the 10-inch wall adjoining the vault and an umbrella used to release the inside door latch, police said.

School authorities said cash was no longer kept in the vault since the most recent burglary, last Jan. 23.

A sign stating the vault contained no money was displayed nearby. Records of 50 recent graduates were burned in the vault.

JOHNSON SAYS HE CAN DEFEAT PARTY OUSTER

County Democratic Chairman Claims 21 of 32 Committeemen Will Back Him.

State Senator John J. Johnson said today 21 of the 32 members of the St. Louis County Democratic Central Committee have promised him their support against a movement to oust him as committee chairman.

The intra-party fight, stemming largely from Johnson's favored position as holder of two important offices in dispensing of patronage, is expected to come to a head at the committee's regular monthly meeting Thursday.

Johnson, who represents the Fifteenth district as Senator and Concord township as committeeman, described the patronage charge as "just a smoke screen by someone wanting power."

Rival Is Devereaux Ally.

One of the leaders in the movement to oust the 33-year-old Johnson is Edward G. Lowther, Gravois township committeeman, unsuccessful candidate for Democratic nomination for sheriff in the primary last August and a political ally of County Collector Ralph L. Devereaux.

Devereaux was Johnson's predecessor as committee chairman, but was disqualified for this post when he failed re-election as Lemay township committeeman last August. He will be retired as collector March 1 when the new county revenue department goes into operation, but he has filed an application for appointment as collector under the new setup.

Lowther asserted that Johnson is unable to do justice to his job as chairman because he spends "three to five days in Jefferson City as senator and so is not available here to people who want to talk to him."

"Also," Lowther continued, "some members of the party think it is unfair that Johnson, who is supposed to represent all the Democrats of the county, should be representing just one district as a senator."

Put in a Bad Position.

"This puts other legislators from the county in a bad position. Also, some of the other committee members think they should be consulted on some of the state patronage jobs."

Lowther said he would expect support on the Johnson ouster from such committee members as Sidney B. McClanahan, of Jefferson township, who sponsored a resolution last July opposing committee members holding public office.

Zoo Supplier Predicts Africans Will Exterminate Wild Animals

Importer Says Hate-America Campaign Is Making It Difficult Now to Obtain Specimens.

The United States within 25 years will be exporting animal specimens to Africa rather than obtaining them from that continent, an animal-importer and breeder predicted here today.

Roland Lindemann of Catskill, N.Y., who supplies zoos from one of the largest animal farms in the United States, said the natives of central and southwest African countries now achieving national independence, "have no interest in preserving rare animals for posterity and when they get their freedom will kill everything for food."

Lindemann is attending a three-day meeting of the American Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums at the Park Plaza Hotel.

Adding to the problem of animal importers, Lindemann continued, is that the African natives are being indoctrinated from Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, to hate all Americans, chiefly because of race discrimination in this country.

"The time will come when it will be unsafe for us to go to Africa. On a trip I made to Rhodesia and Kenya last spring I found tremendous hostility toward American animal buyers. 'Every new political upheaval cuts down on the opportunity to bring out rare species. It is necessary for us to obtain these specimens soon or our posterity will have to see them in museums—stuffed—instead of in zoos."

The national parks in Africa, now used as preserves for wild life, will be a thing of the past as a result of the population growth, coupled with the lack of interest in preserving the animals, Lindemann said.

R. Marlin Perkins, director of Chicago's Lincoln Park Zoo and former herpetologist at the St. Louis Zoo, told of accompanying the recent Himalayan expedition of Sir Edmund Hillary to look for the Abominable Snowman.

He agreed with Sir Edmund's report that all evidence indicated the snowman, or Yeti, as it is known to the Nepalese, is a myth.

"The huge footprints attributed to the creature apparently were those of small animals, which had melted so as to look like large prints," Perkins said. "Stories of the few persons who claimed to have seen the Yeti were vague. We traced the sounds supposed to have been made by the Yeti to the chattering of snow leopards."

opposed to Devereaux, who at that time was both county chairman and collector.

McClanahan said today he was in favor of retaining Johnson, although acknowledging that this put him "in a dilemma" because of his position against dual job-holding.

"I still feel the same way in principle, but Johnson is doing a good job right now and the other side is just using this as an excuse to get him out," McClanahan asserted.

Johnson denied that he has used his position unfairly and said he has never failed to forward names of persons submitted to him for state jobs by other committee members.

CARDINAL RITTER HONORED ON VISIT TO INDIANAPOLIS

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 13 — Cardinal Joseph E. Ritter of St. Louis, former archbishop of Indianapolis, returned here yesterday for the first time since receiving the red hat of his new rank last month in Rome.

Former parishioners thronged a reception in his honor at Cathedral High School last night.

M'DONNELL AIRCRAFT CORP. LAYS OFF 350 WORKERS

About 350 production workers were laid off Friday by McDonnell Aircraft Corp. as part of a scheduled reduction in the work force, it was announced today.

The layoffs reduced the number of employees to 21,700. McDonnell is the largest employer in the St. Louis area.

A company spokesman said employment will continue to decline in the coming months until the work force is reduced to about 20,000. The schedule is based on a backlog of orders. The company completed production of F-101-B Voodoo airplanes for the Air Force in December.

The blaze, apparently caused by defective wiring in a lamp, was confined to the room. Erker was unable to estimate the damage.

Two Cases From Here Reversed for New Trials by Missouri Tribunal.

By BOYD F. CARROLL
Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 13 — The Missouri Supreme Court today sustained the conviction of seven St. Louis defendants for offenses ranging from burglary to the habitual criminal act, and reversed cases of two St. Louis defendants for new trials.

The court affirmed the conviction of Raymond C. Pruitt for armed robbery under the Habitual Criminal Act. He was sentenced to life imprisonment for holding up the Paramount Sandwich Shop, 4032 South Broadway, March 11, 1959.

Other convictions in St. Louis and St. Louis county were sustained as follows:

Harry James Chamineak, convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to seven years in March, 1958, in St. Louis.

Eugene Cross, St. Louis, sentenced to five years in the penitentiary for robbery.

James Rufus Payne, convicted of manslaughter under the habitual criminal act, June 7, 1959, in St. Louis.

Charles Allen, convicted of assault with intent to kill in St. Louis, Sept. 17, 1959. His sentence of 25 years was affirmed.

Tommy Lee Colbert, armed robbery, sentenced to 15 years under the habitual criminal act.

The court also said the General American Life Insurance Co. must pay $54,134 in life insurance claims on the life of Oscar Rose, president of the Midwest Bolt and Supply Co., Kansas City, Rose killed himself two days after the insurance policies were delivered.

CLOSER COLLEGE AND HIGH SCHOOL CONTACTS URGED

By WILLIAM K. WYANT JR.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 13 — The typical American college graduate will continue to be "something less than a first-rate educational product" until there is better co-operation between high schools and colleges, the National Association of Secondary-School Principals was told here today.

Dean Stephen Romine of the college of education, University of Colorado, called for much closer contact between the secondary schools and institutions of higher learning on the problem of what students shall be admitted to college.

Another requirement, he said, is far more effective articulation in education than now exists, from the kindergarten through the graduate school. Articulation means a logical, step-by-step progression in what is taught.

Romine said the use of college admissions tests probably would not have developed so extensively if the standards of performance did not vary so greatly among high schools. He said regional and state accreditation had not functioned well.

Freshmen Not Challenged.

On the other hand, he said, many high schools now are sending to college an increasing number of well-prepared and highly motivated students, and it is common that colleges fail to challenge these students in the freshmen year.

Speaking from the high school viewpoint, Lloyd S. Michael, principal of Evanston (Ill.) Township High School, agreed that co-operation must be improved. However, he said, colleges should not be allowed to dictate high school programs.

"Influences should be encouraged," he said, "that help schools provide more appropriate and higher quality instruction for college-bound students; pressures should be resisted that impair the school's obligation to develop programs suitable for non-college-bound youth."

Michael said there was a tendency on the part of some colleges to require certain high school courses that were irrelevant to success in college as a means of making it simpler for colleges to choose students.

About 4500 school administrators are attending the five-day convention which opened Saturday.

Lawyer Is Speaker.

At a banquet session, Edward Bennett Williams, famous trial lawyer of Washington, D.C., urged that children be taught that there can be no lasting peace until all nations, including the United States, submit to international law.

"Building peace is the greatest task that confronts us in the new era," Williams said. "It cannot be built by arms. It must be built under the law."

George Romney, president of American Motors Corp. of Detroit, said the principles enunciated in the Declaration of Independence and the Bill of Rights should not be regarded as for United States citizens alone. They apply to the entire world, he said.

The United States has developed not only a political system that is unique, Romney said, but an economic system that parallels it. He said the ultimate control is exercised by the people in their capacity as consumers.

NATIONAL CHURCH COUNCIL DENOUNCED BY PASTOR

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 13 (AP)—The Rev. Dr. Charles S. Poling, interim pastor of the First Presbyterian Church here, denounced the National Council of Churches from the pulpit yesterday. In a statement after his sermon, Dr. Poling accused the council of allying itself with Communist fronts.

Citing reasons for his attack, Dr. Poling denounced the council for advocating admission of Red China to the United Nations, opposing the Bricker amendment and right-to-work laws, urging repeal of the Connally reservation and suggesting that riots at San Francisco City Hall were not Communist inspired during the House Un-American Activities Committee hearing.

In New York, a spokesman for the National Council of Churches described Dr. Poling's remarks as "utterly ridiculous." "None of the charges can be proven or demonstrated as being anywhere near the truth," the spokesman said.

Feb. 13 (AP)—A cart horse named Tony bolted into the rough sea off this east coast resort yesterday and drowned.

George Robinson, his owner, followed him into the water. The 5-year-old horse swam strongly out to sea for half a mile and Robinson struggled along behind, calling out "Tony." Then the horse went under and Robinson swam back to shore.

ASSERTS SECULAR LIFE GETS PRIORITY

Christianity exists inside a secular culture, a way of life to which most Christians feel commitments prior to their religious obligations, the Rev. Dr. Martin E. Marty, an editor of Christian Century magazine, said here today.

In an address before delegates to the annual meeting of the division of Christian education of the National Council of Churches, the Rev. Dr. Marty said the old entity called Christendom had "little life in it."

Christian society, he asserted, is "hardly workable where men of many faiths co-exist." He told the group at the Sheraton-Jefferson Hotel that Christianity must seek relations with its changing surroundings, meeting the impact of social change in order to remain vigorous.

At a meeting yesterday, the National Student Christian Federation urged that a federal investigation be made of the film "Operation Abolition."

A resolution adopted by the federation's interim governing body called on the Attorney General's office and a committee of the House of Representatives "to review this film in order to render a decision concerning its true historical sequence and balanced narrative implications."

The film was prepared by the House Committee on Un-American Activities and deals with protests of students against the committee's hearings in San Francisco last May. In the resolution, the federation charged that the purpose of the film is "to demonstrate that the protests were secretly inspired and manipulated by the Communist party."

The implication left, the resolution stated, "is that all protests against the committee renders one a fellow traveler or a dupe of the Communist party."

The resolution said the federation "deplores the guilt by association implied throughout this film" and "voices concern for the developing tendency of persons and groups within our society to limit freedom of speech and association."

Furthermore, it stated, the federation "supports the right of its fellow Christians and others to protest against the committee within the legal means available."

The federation represents the national collegiate bodies of 12 Protestant communions, the Young Men's Christian Association, the Young Women's Christian Association and regional organizations of theological students.

Lumumba

close. He said the three were buried there.

(United Press International quoted Munongo as saying the villagers who killed Lumumba and his aids acted "excusably" because they thought the fugitives were in possession of arms.)

(Munongo said he flew to the scene of the deaths this morning to investigate the reports.

"Because of the few people capable of identifying the three bodies, Minister Kibwe and Minister Kitema went with me," he said. "We were accompanied by a doctor charged with establishing the official death and issuing a certificate to make absolutely certain that it was Lumumba, Okito and Mpolo.")

Hunt Had Been Intensified.

Munongo said earlier 100 police and provincial troops had been thrown into a search for the Lumumba party, with helicopters and spotter planes. One of these planes sighted the car in which Lumumba supposedly fled.

Katanga province, headed by Moise Tshombe, broke away from Lumumba's central Congo government as the ex-postal clerk took over the prime ministry last summer. This was one of the sorest points the Lumumba regime had to face, because Katanga has most of the Congo's mineral riches.

After his arrest Lumumba was first jailed near Leopoldville by Maj. Gen. Joseph Mobutu, the Congo's military strongman. Three weeks ago the ex-premier was brought to Katanga province on the ground he could be detained more safely here.

Tshombe has insisted Lumumba made a genuine escape last week. But he declared Lumumba's fate was an internal matter and none of the United Nations' business. Over the weekend he refused to co-operate with a U.N. team that came here from Leopoldville to investigate.

Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld of the United Nations had sent Brig. Gen. Mengasha Hyassu of Ethiopia, chief of staff of the U.N. command, to investigate Lumumba's fate.

The U.N. command reported two opposing Congo armies were converging on Bumba, a river town on the frontier of Lumumba-aligned Oriental province. A third force of Katanga soldiers was on the move in its own province.

Mobutu was said to be taking 1200 central government troops by boat and plane to Bumba. Rebel troops were reported moving out of Stanleyville, headquarters for Lumumba forces in Oriental province, on their way to Bumba.

The Katanga troops—1200 men commanded by European officers—drove Baluba warriors siding with Lumumba from a garrison at Lueni, a coal mining center in the province.

The U.N. has urged President Tshombe to call off his military drive into north Katanga and warned that responsibility for any brush with U.N. troops "will be entirely his," a U.N. spokesman said in Leopoldville.

The warning was delivered in a note from Rajeshwar Dayal, Indian head of the U.N. Congo mission, transmitted to U.N. authorities in Katanga.

Lumumba was embroiled in controversy from the moment he took over as the Congo's first premier. His brief rule was marked by turmoil and its long aftermath exasperated statesmen from Washington to Moscow. Even in jail his sputtering political star was a force that could not be ignored.

Challenged U.N. Forces.

Lumumba fought the Belgians who freed the country, challenged United Nations forces after inviting them into the Congo to help restore order, and waged a running squabble with tribal leaders in hopes of welding the Congo's feuding tribes into a single nation.

Lumumba's flirtations with the Soviet Union led his political opponents to call him a Communist. Others charged him with fascist rule for insisting on a strong central government.

Lumumba called himself a neutralist and a nationalist desiring only to unite the 13,000,000 Congolese.

Born July 2, 1925, in Katanga-Kombe in Kasai province, Lumumba had only a rudimentary education. He went to primary school in the area of Stanleyville.

Thereafter, he went into training for three years in the Congo's postal services school in Leopoldville, and this resulted in a job as a post office worker.

Later he became chief clerk of a savings bank in Stanleyville. His banking career ended when he was convicted of embezzling $2100 from the bank and sentenced to three years in jail.

Served Year of Sentence.

Belgian authorities released Lumumba after he had served a year and ordered him to repay the missing money. Lumumba said he was framed and that he took the rap for someone else.

Lumumba then moved to the capital city of Leopoldville where he worked first for a law firm and then sold beer for a Belgian-owned brewery.

Lumumba never made any secret of his hatred for Belgium's colonial administration, but for all that, he was Western in his tastes and inclination. He never smoked and only occasionally took a glass of wine.

His tribal background may have contributed to his resentment for the Europeans. He sprang from the Batetela tribe, used by the Belgians in the early colonial days 80 years ago to fight other rebellious Congolese. The Belgians in 1893 accused the Batetela chief, Congo Lutete, of treason and executed him. The tribe went on the warpath. Lumumba as a child heard many a tale of those days.

Visits Lumumba's Cell.

By United Press International.

U.P.I. correspondent Dieter Steiner was the first reporter to visit the reported farmhouse prison of Lumumba near Mungulunga.

Steiner said the shack in which the three men were reported held measured 15 feet by nine. It was furnished with a double bed, four chairs and a table.

All three men slept in the same bed, and were exercised for one hour each morning and evening, handcuffed all the time, according to Belgian Capt. Julien Gat, who commanded the Katanga garrisons guarding Lumumba.

The shack had only one door.

Two men, a soldier and a policeman, sat in front of it at all times and the one window was barred with wooden slats.

The walls of the hut were built of sandstone. Gat said that Thursday night Lumumba and his two companions forced a hole through the side away from the guards with a piece of iron. It was not known where they got the iron.

After wriggling through the hole, Gat said, the three armed themselves with tree branches, stole up behind their guards and knocked them unconscious.

"I saw both guards and there was no doubt each had been struck heavily on the back of the head," Steiner said.

Gat told Steiner that Lumumba, Mpolo and Okito stole past the hut where 14 other guards were sleeping and pushed a police car about a quarter of a mile down the dirt road linking Mungulunga with Elisabethville.

They started the engine by shorting the ignition and drove about 30 miles from Mungulunga before losing their way, Gat said. The car was found abandoned and wrecked on a dead-end road.

and monopoly and human exploitation—but we are not opposed to business.

"We know that your success and ours are intertwined—that you have facts and know-how we need. Whatever past differences may have existed, we seek more than an attitude of truce, more than a treaty—we seek the spirit of a full-fledged alliance."

Jolted by Congo Killings.

White House Press Secretary Pierre Salinger said this morning that President Kennedy "expressed great shock" when told news of the death of deposed Patrice Lumumba of the Congo. Shortly after Mr. Kennedy returned to his desk after an hour's drive from Middleburg, it was announced that he would confer with the Prime Ministers of Australia and New Zealand within the next three weeks.

Salinger said Prime Minister Robert Gordon Menzies of Australia will arrive here Feb. 22 and meet with the President Feb. 24. Prime Minister Keith J. Holyoake of New Zealand will arrive March 2 and confer with Mr. Kennedy the next day. The President also has scheduled a conference here Feb. 20 with Canadian Prime Minister John Diefenbaker.

Mr. Kennedy returned by automobile this morning from his estate in Middleburg. His plans to make the 42-mile trip by helicopter were canceled when a heavy fog blanketed the area. He changed plans twice before finally starting out by car over snow-covered roads.

The President flew to Middleburg by helicopter Saturday for his first look at the 400-acre Glen Ora estate which he leased for a year. His initial weekend away from the White House provided an opportunity for rest, relaxation and time with his family.

Mrs. Kennedy and their 3-year-old daughter, Caroline, arrived in Middleburg by helicopter a day ahead of the President. Mrs. Kennedy and Caroline intended to stay until tomorrow night or Wednesday.

The President made only one public appearance during his stay—to go to church—but he pulled Caroline on a sled about the grounds of the estate yesterday.

benefits under limited conditions."

Several organizations of doctors are opposed to social security system handling the health insurance program, saying that it would be the first step to "socialized medicine."

Business men opposed a similar measure last year. They were against the increase in their social security payments and the rise in the taxable earnings base. Organized labor, in general, favors the social security methods of financing.

United Nations

from his special representative in the Congo, Rajeshwar Dayal of India, detailing efforts to investigate the Lumumba affair, be added to the agenda. He also called for an "international investigation in an appropriate form."

He called the report of Lumumba's death "news of a most serious and tragic nature."

U.N. representatives in the Congo, he added, have not yet been received by President Moise Tshombe of Katanga, in their efforts to investigate the reports concerning Lumumba. Hammarskjöld added that he had instructed Brig. Gen. Mengasha Hyassu of Ethiopia, chief of staff of the U.N. force, "to stay until either he is received and can proceed with his task with the necessary assistance from the authorities or until he receives new instructions in the light of the position of this council."

'Distressing News.'

Stevenson said the death of Lumumba is "distressing and deplorable news."

"Those of us who have wholeheartedly supported the United Nations assistance to the Congo," Stevenson continued, "have done so with a view to bringing order and stability to a land torn apart by internal strife and intervention from the outside. The death of Mr. Lumumba without trial or judgment is sad testimony to the distance we still have to travel before our task there will be completed."

No diplomat here attempted to disguise the difficulty of the situation which now faces the U.N. in the Congo. News of Lumumba's death was received a few minutes before the Council meeting was set to begin.

The Soviet attack on Hammarskjöld had been anticipated. Some Asian and African delegates will listen to such attacks with more sympathy now, diplomats feared.

Investigation Urged.

As Omar Loutfi of the United Arab Republic pointed out at the Council meeting, nine African-Asian nations and Yugoslavia last week addressed a note to the Secretary General urging an investigation of the reported escape of Lumumba. The note expressed the "fear that the news of the escape may be a camouflage and may have been inspired in preparation for announcing the death of Mr. Lumumba."

The Soviet Union had requested an emergency private meeting of the Security Council Saturday to consider the Lumumba affair and was turned down by other members of the Council.

Zorin called the death of Lumumba "one of the gravest crimes of the colonizers against the Congolese people." He blamed Belgium for Lumumba's death, adding that Belgium's "allies and agents" must share the blame and "must be made to pay."

THEFT OF $4000 MINK COAT AT COUNTRY CLUB REPORTED

Theft of a full-length, natural brown mink coat valued at $4000 was reported to police today by Mrs. Henry J. Heitner, 625 South Skinker boulevard.

Mrs. Heitner told St. Louis county police that she placed the coat in an unattended cloak room at Bellevue Country Club, Ladue and Mason roads, St. Louis county, about 1 p.m. yesterday.

LONDONERS FLOCK BY THOUSANDS TO LAUTREC EXHIBIT

LONDON, Feb. 13 (AP)—The ghost of Henri de Toulouse-Lautrec must be quietly chuckling today at the success he is enjoying in London.

British art lovers are lining up by the thousands to visit an exhibition of 89 of the Frenchman's paintings and drawings at the Tate Gallery. The last time Toulouse-Lautrec had a London exhibition on such a scale was in 1898, three years before his death at the age of 36.

The critics and a hostile public at that time decried the cruelly accurate pictures of Paris night life as "vulgar" and "revolting."

Toulouse-Lautrec, in London at the time, took it all in stride. The little man, whose legs were stunted by two falls in childhood, peered through his pince-nez and was amused.

Now he comes back as a giant. His new exhibition—of the same paintings — is drawing only praise from critics and admiration from the public. The show will continue through March 15.

2 PEDESTRIANS DIE IN EAST SIDE AUTO ACCIDENTS

Two pedestrians were killed in separate accidents in the East St. Louis area over the weekend, police reported today.

A man identified as Francis Wingfield, of Mount Vernon, Ill., was fatally injured early today when struck by an automobile on Illinois Route 33, two miles south of Belleville.

David Harris, Freeburg, Ill., told St. Clair county deputy sheriffs he was driving south on the two-lane highway when the man darted in front of his car from the side of the road.

Wingfield, 40 years old, was taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital in East St. Louis.

Leland Cluck, 910 Parsons avenue, East St. Louis, was killed when struck by an automobile at the intersection of Ninth street and Summit avenue, East St. Louis, Saturday night.

Hit Near Barricade.

Miss Margaret McClinton, 404 South Combs street, Collinsville, told police she was driving south in Ninth, and was attempting to drive around a street repair barricade placed at the intersection when she saw Cluck step into the street. She swerved, but could not avoid hitting him, she said.

Cluck, 37, was pronounced dead at St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis.

In another accident Saturday night, two St. Louisans were killed and seven persons were injured in the head-on collision of two automobiles on U.S. Highway 67 near Desloge, Mo.

Those killed were Mrs. St. Clair Roddy, 36 years old, of 3734 St. Louis avenue, and her brother, Ermon Puckett, 48, of 5607 Bartmer avenue, both passengers in a station wagon driven by Mrs. Roddy's husband.

South in Northbound Lane.

The Missouri Highway Patrol said the Roddy automobile, was going south in a northbound lane of the divided highway, and struck a machine driven by Richard D. Dimock, 23, of O'Fallon, Ill.

Dimock suffered a fractured left knee and multiple contusions. His wife, Doris, 19, suffered a fractured right leg, and their five-month-old son, Richard Jr., received multiple bruises. Another passenger in the car, John Thompson, 54, 6108 Ohio avenue, East St. Louis, suffered several fractured ribs and internal injuries.

Other passengers in the Roddy machine were Archie Puckett, 45, Ermon's brother, and the Roddy's 4-year-old daughter, Yvonne. Roddy suffered several fractured ribs. The younger Puckett suffered a fractured hip and multiple bruises. The girl suffered head injuries.

All of the injured were taken to the Bonne Terre, Mo., Hospital. Mr. and Mrs. Dimock were later transferred to Barnes Hospital, and their son to St. Louis Children's Hospital. Roddy, his daughter, and Puckett were transferred to Homer G. Phillips Hospital.

OFFICER SAYS PRISONER HIT HIM THROUGH BARS OF CELL

Patrolman Charles Robertson suffered an injury to his left eye yesterday when a prisoner at the Lynch street police station called him over to a cell and suddenly punched him through the bars, Robertson reported.

His assailant, identified as Robert W. Harman, insurance adjuster, of the 1500 block of Ogden avenue, Wellston, had been arrested Saturday for having a defective muffler and being without a driver's license. The arrest was not made by Robertson.

Robertson said he knocked Harman to the floor of the cell after the prisoner grabbed his tie. Both men were treated at City Hospital. Robertson for a bruised eye and broken blood vessel of the right hand, and Harman for lacerations and abrasions. Harman, 50 years old, who gave no explanation for his actions, was ordered to police court tomorrow on a charge of assault and peace disturbance.

The official Vatican yearbook for 1961 has dropped from the list Pope Stephen II, an eighth century Roman priest who died two days after his election.

Footnotes in the new yearbook and in previous editions said his name did not appear on early lists of Popes because he died before his coronation. The footnotes said it was the practice in the eighth century not to consider a man Pope until his coronation.

STOMACH TENSION
Tablet discovery checks attacks in seconds...

to keep acid stomach soothed for hours N.Y., N.Y. (Special). Medical science knows that today, millions suffer from Stomach Tension... a distress caused by today's hectic pace of living.
Stomach Tension pours wave after wave of burning acid onto delicate stomach tissues. But ordinary antacids merely relieve the first wave of acid... then leave the stomach open to further attack. An antacid was needed that could give prolonged soothing relief... the same amazing relief that doctors knew a warm glass of milk gave. The answer came when physicians discovered a Glycine compound—a medication that soothed a burning acid stomach even better than a warm glass of milk. This compound gave faster relief than ordinary antiacids, and actually worked to soothe the stomach for hours.
This most effective compound is named Amitone.
If you have Stomach Tension and ordinary antacids don't give the relief you want, get Amitone. No prescription needed.

was not surprised by the announcement.
"We have known for some time," Dryden said, "that they had the booster capability for such a mission."
(United States space officials pointed out, however, that the United States already has successfully fired a rocket into the area of Venus with somewhat the same purpose as that announced by the Russians.
(The referred to Pioneer V, the 94.8-pound rocket launched last March 11 from Cape Canaveral, Fla. Its main aim was to go into orbit around the sun, although the general purpose was somewhat like the new Soviet probe, NASA officials said.
(However, the object of Pioneer V was to come within about 4,000,000 miles of Venus's orbital path. Calculations indicated it missed even this mark by about 3,000,000 miles.
(The Russians expect to come much closer. Prof. Oleg Melnikov of Leningrad Observatory told Tass it is hoped the space vehicle will pass through the thick clouds blanketing Venus.

with the earth when it was 22, 500,000 miles away.)
The Soviet announcement indicated the Venus launching was an extremely complex operation.
It said a multi-stage rocket carried a Sputnik into orbit, another rocket was launched from the Sputnik and the second rocket fired off "an automatic interplanetary" station with the intent either of hitting Venus or going into orbit around it.
There was no indication of the rocket's present speed. But the first announcement said that at noon Sunday Moscow time the space station already was 126,300 kilometers (75,780 miles) from the earth. The Russians said the traveler's radio transmitter and other equipment were functioning normally and that the station was being tracked by a special center.
"In conformity with the Soviet space research program," the Russians said, "a heavy artificial satellite of the earth was orbited in the Soviet Union on Feb. 12, 1961, by an improved multi-stage rocket.
"On the same day, a guided space rocket, launched from the Sputnik, sent an automatic interplanetary station on a flight to the planet Venus."

'To Fathom Mystery.'
The launching was described by Nikolai Barabashov, director of the observatory of Kharkov
State University, in an article taking up more than half of the second page of Pravda.
"We shall be able to fathom the mystery of Venus, the closest sister of the earth," Barabashov declared.
(Sir Bernard Lovell, director of Britain's giant Jodrell Bank radio telescope, hailed the launching as fantastic and wished the Russians good luck in their bid to reach Venus.
(Prof. Harrie Massey, chairman of Britain's National Committee on Space Research, said the Russians have launched "an extraordinarily interesting and exciting adventure."
(The latest Soviet space probe came eight days after the launching of a seven-ton satellite whose radio silence has mystified Western scientists.)

Soviet scientists have been speculating for several months that a rocket to the vicinity of Venus might solve the mystery of whether there is life on the planet. Prof. Boris Kukarkin is among those who have speculated that there is life there.
Venus is the third brightest object in the earth's sky, out-shone only by the sun and moon.
The cloud-shrouded planet is sometimes called the earth's twin. It is about 7700 miles in diameter, near the size of the earth, and its weight is about 81 per cent of the earth's mass.
Twice As Much Sunlight.
Venus orbits 67,000,000 miles from the sun on an average, about a third closer than the earth, and thus gets about twice as much sunlight and heat as the earth. Thus astronomers say Venus may be hundreds of degrees hot on its surface, which would seem to rule out any form of life as man knows it. It would also be too hot for oceans or seas but indicates that the planet may be enveloped in clouds of steam.
A. Mikhailov, director of the Pulkovo Observatory, reported that the distance between Venus and the earth is now 52,800,000 miles but is shortening each day by almost 600,000 miles.
"In the second half of May," Mikhailov told Tass, the Soviet new agency, "the rocket will make its closest approach to Venus and it is possible that this brief span of time will yield more information about this planet than the entire previous history of investigations."
Mikhailov indicated that if the space probe of Venus is successful, similar investigation will be made of Mars.

'New, Wonderful Day.'
Tributes from a host of leading Soviet scientists filled the Pravda columns.
"Feb. 12, 1961 is a new, wonderful date," said L. I. Sedov, president of the International Astronautic Federation. "It is the date of the inauguration of interplanetary travel. The mystery planet of our solar system becomes the object of direct and tangible investigation carried out with physical devices and rockets.
"Man is boldly, confidently and in a businesslike fashion gaining a foothold within the confines of the unknown."

In London the Daily Express commented:
"Now it is Venus; and the Russians make the greatest space shot yet."
Several newspapers said the achievement put Russia way ahead of the United States in the space race but the Express editorial added confidently:
"The Americans, of course, will not be content with envy.
They will shoot back to outdo the Russians with a still more brilliant achievement."
No Comment.

In Washington, White House press secretary Pierre Salinger declined to comment on whether there were any plans to cooperate with the Russians in the Venus probe. So far, each nation has gone its separate way in space research, although a limited amount of information has been exchanged.
A Defense Department spokesman would not say just how soon after the launching the military learned of the new Soviet space achievement. Nor would he say whether the report came from intelligence sources or from tracking operations.
The spokesman said there would be no further comment from the Pentagon on the rocket, but in line with new procedures it would leave it to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to give out any information.

At NASA, Dr. Dryden said the path of the satellite, in or on which the rocket bearing the Venus probe rode, could be described as a "parking orbit" for the Venus rocket before its own blastoff high in space.
He said the technique had been described in scientific literature, and he indicated that U.S.
space experts are also working on the idea.
"We are working hard," Dryden said, "on improving our booster capability. And, in our long-range planning, if all goes well, we would expect to attempt such a mission in another year and a half to two years."

Asked whether Russia had used an electrical propulsion system for the second rocket, Dryden said that for a mission of the type described by the Russians it would not be necessary.
"Straight chemical propulsion of the second rocket could have been used," he said.
Russia's new feat pioneered one of the future goals of the space age. This is to build launching pads and refueling stations orbiting high above the earth.
Rockets taking off from such space stations already would have overcome much of the earth's tugging pull of gravity.
They would not have to spend lots of fuel rising up just to heights of 200 to 300 miles. All their fuel could be used for the long, long journey to other planets and distant reaches of space.

The new shot could explain the mystery of the seven-ton Russian satellite lofted 10 days before. It was testing this system. A high Soviet official has said it was intended to check on how to put such a mammoth satellite into an accurate orbit.

Youths Admit Theft.
Pine Lawn police reported yesterday three 16-year-old youths admitted taking $2650 and three watches from the home of Frank G. Smith, 3719 Rossiter avenue, a patient at Jewish Hospital. All but $355 was recovered.

The theft was reported by one youth who was taking care of the house in the absence of the 73-year-old owner. The youth told police two friends had visited him at the Smith home, and he had shown them Smith's wallet containing the money.

When questioned by police, a second youth admitted stealing the money, it was reported. He and his friend used $355 to buy an automobile muffler and clothing. One youth was turned over to St. Louis county juvenile officers and the other two were released to their parents.

Theft of more than $400 from the Capri Laundry, 8351 Olive boulevard, University City, was reported yesterday. University City police said burglars pried open a rear door Saturday night and took from a desk three canvas bags and a cash register drawer containing the money.

The theft was discovered by the owners of the laundry, Paul Castelli, 11 Pricewoods lane, Olivette, and Alphonse Indelicato, 7705 Arthur avenue, Richmond Heights.
University City police reported today the theft of $209 from a cash register at the Lily Cleaners, 7111 Olive boulevard. Entrance to the shop was by forc-

Suggestions For Lenten Menus

By Dorothy Brainerd
Post-Dispatch Food Editor

IT IS SMALL WONDER that the homemaker who spends most of the year planning meals to pamper the individual tastes of her family should be dismayed when faced with weeks of the food restrictions that are part of the Lenten observance in many faiths. This sudden switch from feasting to fasting isn't easy, but it is a challenge rather than a burden to the conscientious wife and mother.

Eggs, the whole family of dairy products, spaghetti, vegetables, rice, the harvest of sea and rivers—surely with these good foods at her command Lenten menu planning becomes a matter of ingenuity rather than supply.

There is one more day before the Lenten season starts, however; a day that rates an occasion all its own. Shrove Tuesday is known by many names—Mardi Gras, Fat Tuesday and Pancake day. It became known as Fat Tuesday when thrifty housewives, preparing for the Lenten fast, used up all their cooking fats on this day by making pancakes.

Tradition had its way through the generations, so that Shrove Tuesday has become synonymous with a meal of light, fluffy pancakes.

Shrove-tide Rolls, filled and topped with a colorful Egg Sauce, are not only appropriate for Shrove Tuesday; they may be served throughout the Lenten season which follows.

Bake large and small pancakes; then serve them in various ways. Stack individual servings of small pancakes with the Egg Sauce between layers to form a "torte." Overlap small Shrove-tide Rolls on a long dish with the sauce between and over the top. Or bake large pancakes, spread with sauce, then roll up jelly-roll fashion. Spoon more sauce over the top, and there is a meal for four.

Fish With Savory Pimiento Stuffing

Shrove-tide Rolls

One and one-half cups sifted enriched flour.

One and one-half teaspoons baking powder.

One-half teaspoon salt.

Two tablespoons sugar.

One egg, beaten.

One and one-third cups milk.

Three tablespoons melted shortening or oil.

Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and sugar.

Combine egg and milk. Add to flour mixture, stirring until mixture is smooth. Add shortening and blend well.

Bake on ungreased griddle until golden brown, turning only once. Allow half of batter (about one and one-fourth cups) for each 10-inch pancake. Remove to heated platter, spread with egg filling, and roll.

Or bake smaller pancakes and stack several for each serving.

Allow about three tablespoons batter for two-inch pancakes; about one-third cup batter for four-inch pancakes. Spoon remaining filling over tops of pancakes. Cut into serving portions.

Yield: four to six servings.

Egg Sauce:

One 10½ ounce can condensed cream of celery soup (about one and one-fourth cups).

One-fourth cup water.

One-half teaspoon salt.

One-eighth teaspoon cayenne

pepper.

One cup shredded sharp cheddar cheese.

Six hard-cooked eggs, diced.

Blend soup, water, salt and cayenne pepper and heat to boiling. Add cheese and eggs and heat until cheese is melted.

TWO GOOD LENTEN foods—fish and eggs—are combined in this recipe for a filling main dish.

Fish sticks, an innovation of the fifties, certainly are here to stay. Unknown 10 years ago, Americans ate some 61,000,000 pounds of them last year. They make a fine lunch or supper dish when prepared in an interesting manner. They can be folded into an omelet, for instance; use one eight-ounce package of fish sticks for the filling, heat another to serve as an accompaniment.

Fish Stick Omelet.

Two tablespoons butter.

Eight eggs.

One-fourth cup milk.

Salt and pepper.

Two packages (eight ounces each) quick-frozen pre-cooked fish sticks.

Heat one package frozen fish sticks as directed on the package.

Heat butter in a large heavy skillet, tipping to grease sides and bottom of pan.

Beat eggs, milk and seasonings together until blended. Pour mixture into skillet and cook over low heat until a film of cooked egg has formed on bottom of pan.

Break one package frozen fish sticks into small bite-sized pieces into omelet mixture. Lift edge of cooked egg and tilt pan to let uncooked portion run under cooked portion. Again cook until a film of cooked egg forms.

Repeat lifting and tilting process until entire mixture is cooked and golden brown on bottom, about 10 minutes.

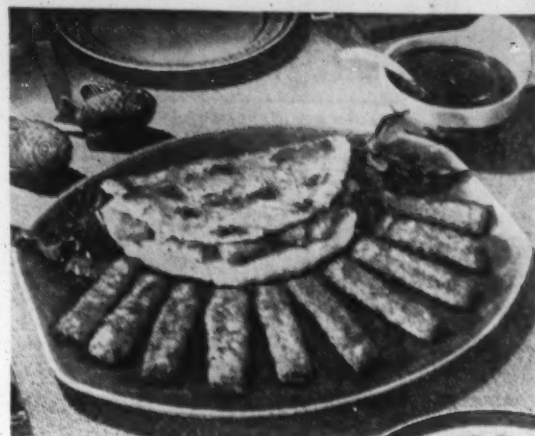

Loosen omelet with spatula, fold in half and slide onto a warm platter. Garnish platter with additional fish sticks and serve with tomato sauce or chili sauce.

Yield: six servings.

FISH STICKS are, of course, just one of the many forms in which fish can come to the Lenten table. Fillets, such as haddock, sole, flounder or cod, also are inexpensive and easy to prepare. A whole baked fish is a handsome dish; canned fish may be used in many appetizing ways.

Most fish is at its best when seasonings accent its delicate flavor and a bit of color is introduced for eye appeal.

Pimiento Stuffing, for instance, accomplishes both of these purposes. The mild spicy flavor of pimientos is combined with the subtle seasoning of sage, celery and onion in a blend that enhances rather than overpowers

Fish Sticks Omelet

the taste of the fish.

Use it for the individual servings of stuffed fillets as well as in whole and larger pieces of baked fish.

Savory Pimiento Stuffing.

One-half cup celery, sliced thin.

One small onion, minced.

One-half cup butter or margarine.

One cup hot broth or water.

One can or jar (four ounces) pimientos, chopped.

One-fourth teaspoon sage.

One teaspoon salt.

One-eighth teaspoon pepper.

One quart diced day-old bread.

Saute celery and onion in hot butter or margarine; stir in broth or water and bring to a boil.

Combine all ingredients and mix lightly. Taste and adjust seasonings if needed.

If other seasoning is preferred try thyme or marjoram in place of sage. Use one seasoning only, not all, as excessive seasoning will kill delicate flavor of the fish.

To Stuff Fish Fillets: Use two to three pounds fish fillets such as haddock, sole, flounder or cod. These may be fresh or thawed frozen. Trim and flatten slightly with the flat of a knife.

Brush fillets with lemon juice and melted butter; spread with stuffing and roll up. Fillets may be secured with toothpicks or a band of foil.

Place fillets in greased muffin tins or greased shallow casserole and sprinkle with lemon juice. Bake in a moderately hot oven, 375 degrees, about 30 minutes, or until tender.

Serve garnished with crisscrossed pimiento strips, lemon wedges and parsley.

Yield: six to eight servings.

For Baked Whole Fish: Use a four to five pound fish suitable for baking, such as red snapper. Have fish cleaned and ready for baking. Let fish stand in salted water to cover for about five minutes; rinse and drain.

Cut several gashes about one-fourth inch deep on each side of fish to prevent skin from splitting.

Stuff fish with savory pimiento stuffing and secure opening with pins and string, or sew with needle and thread.

Brush well with melted fat or salad oil and place on greased oven platter or shallow baking dish. Bake uncovered in hot oven (500 degrees) about 10 minutes; reduce heat to moderate (350 degrees) and continue baking for about 45 minutes, or until tender and easily flaked. Allow about 10-12 minutes baking time per pound of fish.

HOW LONG has it been since you served salmon croquettes? Made with a cream sauce, they make a nutritious main dish that serves well as Lenten fare.

If you have skipped them because you thought they had to be fried and you are avoiding extra calories, remember that they also may be baked.

In this recipe they are rolled in packaged corn flake crumbs to give them a crisp exterior while the inside stays soft and moist. Lemon juice and a little tabasco are added to the salmon mixture for a lively taste.

Tartar sauce is the usual accompaniment to croquettes; make your own or use one of the commercially prepared ones, adding a little tabasco to it, too, for extra zip.

Salmon Croquettes

One can (one pound) salmon.

Milk.

One-fourth cup butter or margarine.

Two tablespoons minced onion.

One-third cup flour.

Three-fourths teaspoon salt.

One tablespoon lemon juice.

One cup (approximately) packaged corn flake crumbs.

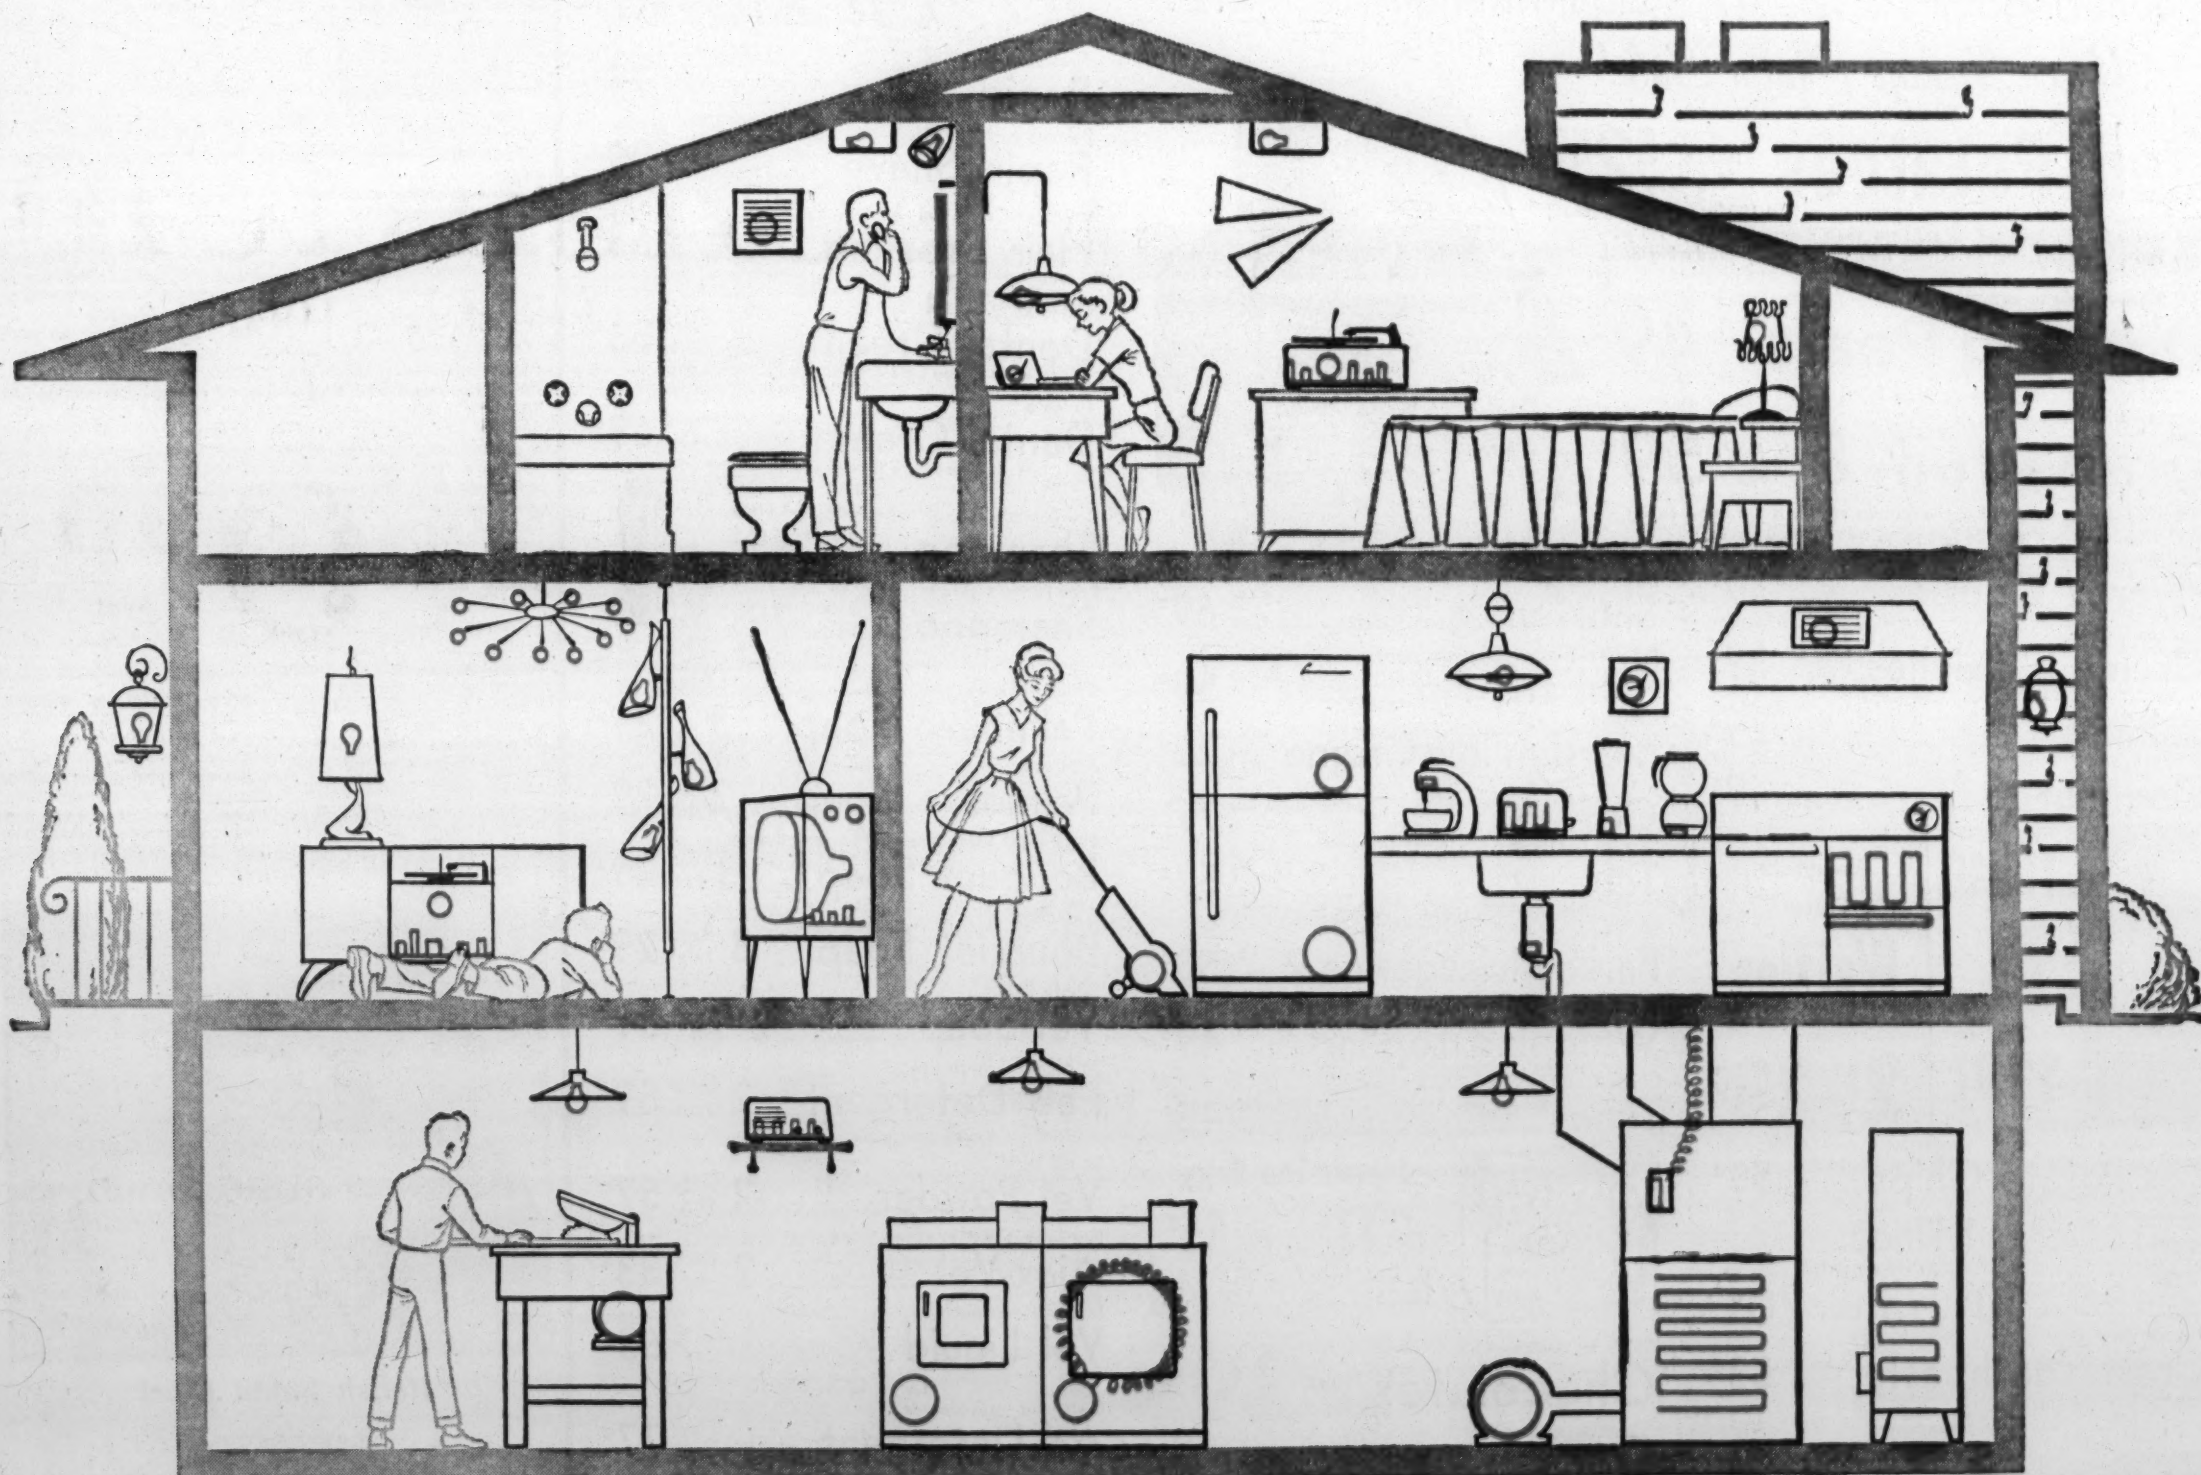

Drain liquid from salmon into measuring cup; add milk to make one cup liquid.

Melt butter in saucepan; add onion and cook until tender but not brown. Blend in flour, salt and tabasco. Add milk mixture and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened.

Flake salmon and add to sauce with lemon juice. Stir in one-half cup corn flake crumbs. Refrigerate until chilled.

Divide into eight or 10 portions and shape into cones. Roll in remaining corn flake crumbs to coat well. Place on greased baking sheet and bake in hot oven (400 degrees) 20 to 25 minutes until golden brown. Yield: four to five servings.

Lent Menus

Zippy Tartar Sauce:
One-half teaspoon tabasco.
One teaspoon vinegar.
One cup mayonnaise.
One tablespoon minced onion.
One tablespoon chopped parsley.

One tablespoon chopped green olive.
Two tablespoons chopped pickle.

Stir tabasco and vinegar into mayonnaise. Add remaining ingredients; mix well. Yield: about one and one-third cups.

Tuna fish is a staple in most households; here it is combined with noodles (another Lenten standby) made flavorful with caraway seed.

Incidentally, if you are familiar with caraway seeds only in rye bread, you have a pleasant experience in store. Try them with cheese, sauerkraut, onions, new cabbage, pork or as here, with noodles.

Caraway Seed Noodle Ring With Creamed Tuna Fish
One-half pound noodles.
One tablespoon caraway seed.
One tablespoon butter or margarine.

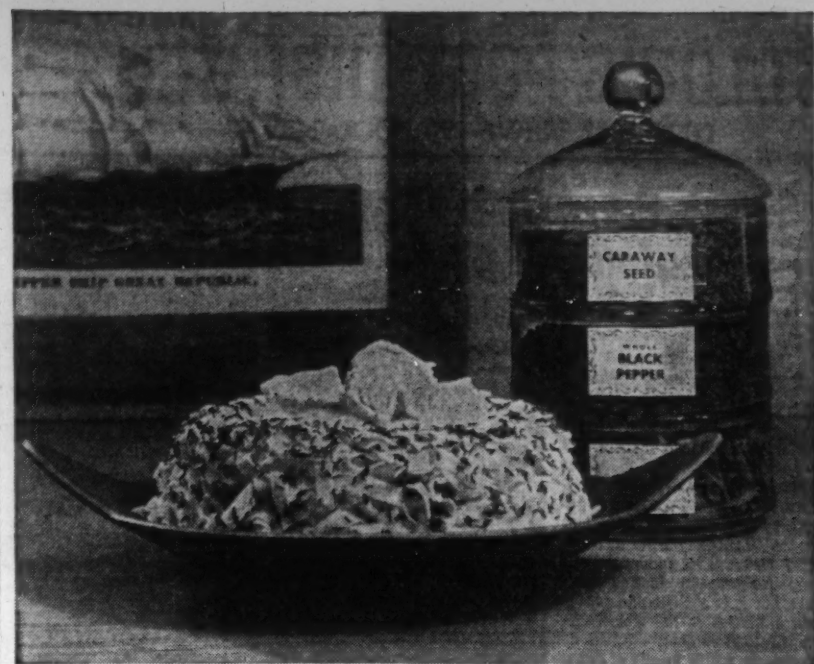

Three tablespoons butter or margarine.

Three tablespoons flour.
One and one-half cups milk.
Two six-ounce cans tuna fish.
Three-fourths teaspoon salt.
One-fourth teaspoon ground thyme.
One-eighth teaspoon ground black pepper.

Cook noodles in rapidly boiling salted water according to package directions. Drain and rinse. Add caraway seed and the one tablespoon butter or margarine. Toss lightly and turn into a buttered one and one-half quart ring mold. Place in a pan of hot water to keep warm.

Melt the three tablespoons butter or margarine in a saucepan. Blend in flour. Stir in milk and cook until of medium thickness, stirring constantly.

Drain tuna fish, flake and add

Creamed Tuna in Caraway Noodles Ring

to the white sauce. Add seasonings; mix well. Heat, stirring as little as possible to avoid mashing tuna fish.

Turn out noodle ring on hot platter. Full center with creamed tuna fish. Garnish with parsley and pimiento.

Yield: six servings.

Suggested Lenten Menu:
Cream of Spinach Soup with Buttered Croutons; Caraway Seed Noodle Ring with Creamed Tuna Fish; Harvard Beets; Mixed Green Salad with Cottage Cheese Mayonnaise; Sliced Bananas with Cream; Coffee.

VEGETABLES GAIN STATUS in meatless meals; here's a combination which is especially good with fish or seafood. The fresh frozen peas are gently simmered with a subtle seasoning of bay leaf and onion, then combined with cubes of Cheddar cheese and sliced ripe olives.

Calico Peas
One-half cup coarsely chopped onion.
Two tablespoons butter or margarine.

One package (10 ounces) frozen green peas, separated.

One small bay leaf.

Three-fourths teaspoon salt.

Two to three tablespoons water.

One cup (one-fourth inch) cubes of natural Cheddar cheese, about four ounces.

One-half cup sliced pitted black olives.

Saute onion in butter or margarine until soft but not brown in eight-inch frying pan. Add peas, bay leaf, salt and water. Cover tightly and simmer just until peas are tender, five to eight minutes. Stir in cheese and olives. Serve immediately.

Yield: four servings.

Suggested Menu: Broiled salmon steaks; Baked potatoes with dilled sour cream; Platter of raw carrot and celery sticks; Minted Peas and cookies; Coffee or Tea.

From Sweden comes this vegetable dish suitable either for left-overs or "first time" vegetables. In combination with milk, eggs and cheese, these vegetables provide a generous number of minerals, vitamins and proteins. In addition to all of this good nutrition, this recipe makes vegetables sit up and sing with new heartiness and flavor.

Vegetables Au Gratin (Gronskagratin)

Two cups cooked cabbage coarsely chopped.

Two cups cooked chopped celery.

Two cups cooked snap beans.

Two tomatoes thickly sliced.

Two tablespoons butter or margarine.

Two cups milk.

Salt and pepper.

Two egg yolks.

One cup grated cheddar cheese.

Melt butter in saucepan and stir in flour until well blended.

Add milk gradually while stirring and cook over low heat for 10 minutes, stirring occasionally.

Remove from heat and add beaten egg yolks. Return to heat and bring to a boil while stirring.

Add half of grated cheese. Remove from heat and continue to stir until sauce is thick and smooth. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

Arrange all vegetables except tomatoes in a well greased shallow baking dish. Pour sauce over vegetables and arrange slices of tomatoes in a circle around edge of dish. Sprinkle salt and pepper over tomatoes and sprinkle remaining cheese over entire dish.

Place under broiler or in a very hot oven (500 degrees) for 10 to 15 minutes or until nicely browned. Serve immediately.

Yield: six or seven servings.

SALADS ALSO take on importance during the Lenten season . . . not the fancy, dainty type but generous salad bowls that combine robust ingredients in an appetizing way.

Crisp greens (whichever ones look the freshest in your food store on that particular day) are the base on which the vegetables are arranged.

A liberal sprinkling of toasted sesame seeds, shredded Parmesan cheese or similar toppings are attractive garnishes.

The dressing may be as simple as mayonnaise (plain or with a bit of chili sauce stirred in), or may be sour cream or one of the thinner Italian or French dressings.

Wit a dark, whole grain bread or crusty rolls, a beverage and dessert, Relish Salad Bowl makes a nutritious lunch or supper.

Relish Salad Bowl.

One seven-ounce can ripe olives.

One eight-ounce can artichoke hearts.

One eight-ounce can button mushrooms.

One-fourth cup tart French dressing.

Crisp salad greens.

Six mild onion slices.

12 cucumber slices.

Toasted sesame seeds or shredded Parmesan cheese.

Creamy Relish

Dressing:

Two or three anchovies.

One cup mayonnaise.

One-half cup chili sauce.

Two teaspoons lemon juice.

Use pitted whole olives or cut olives into large wedges. Drain olives and turn into a bowl.

Drain artichokes; cut in half and add with drained mushrooms to olives. Add tart French dressing;

stir gently and chill.

When ready to serve, fill salad bowl with crisp greens of your choice; romaine, bib or leaf lettuce, chicory, watercress or finely shredded cabbage.

Arrange marinated olives and vegetables on greens; drizzle any remaining marinade over all.

Sprinkle with sesame seeds or cheese. Serve with

Creamy Relish Dressing: Mash

or chop anchovies fine. Blend all ingredients; let stand an hour or longer to blend flavors.

Yield: six servings.

Tuna Waldorf

If you're watching calories, Tuna Waldorf is for you. Drain six and one half-ounce can tuna; flake and combine with one half cup diced apples, one quarter cup chopped celery, two tablespoons chopped walnuts and one quarter cup mayonnaise that has been seasoned with fresh lemon juice.

Juice.
One-third cup fresh lemon

Two egg whites.
One cup heavy cream.

Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry; beat cream until stiff. Fold both into chilled gelatin along with sliced cherries, orange segments and coconut.
Spoon into a two-quart, heart-shaped mold and chill until firm. Unmold onto serving platter, surrounding mold with orange segments and stemmed cherries. Garnish top of mold with toasted coconut.
Yield: eight servings.

Vegetables To Serve With Fish

Serving fish for dinner? These frozen vegetable recipes were developed especially to give Lenten menus zest.

Frozen broccoli spears dressed with curry butter add just the right touch of color and spicy flavor to a quick dinner of ready-to-heat French fried potatoes. (Did you know that fish that is frozen creates less cooking odor?)

The Green Beans in Sweet-Sour Sauce are a quick top-of-the-stove vegetable to serve with seafood.
Savory Tomato Baked Cauliflower is a slower cooking oven vegetable, ideal with an oven-cooked fish dinner.

Green Beans in Sweet-Sour Sauce.

One package frozen French cut green beans.
One-fourth cup water for cooking beans and for sauce.
One medium onion, sliced (or one-half cup sliced green onions).
One teaspoon salt.
Pepper.
One teaspoon monosodium glutamate.
One-fourth cup brown sugar.
One teaspoon cornstarch.
One-half cup vinegar.
Turn frozen green beans into saucepan and add the water, onion, salt, pepper to taste, and monosodium glutamate. Cover and cook until just tender.

While beans are cooking, stir brown sugar and cornstarch together. Drain water from beans into another saucepan.

Blend brown sugar and cornstarch with vinegar and add to water drained from beans. Bring to a boil. Turn beans into sauce and simmer a few minutes to blend flavors. Serve immediately.
Yield: Four servings.

Serve with fish sticks, tomato and cucumber salad, and frozen pecan or peach pie for dessert.

Savory Tomato-Cauliflower.

Two packages frozen cauliflower.
Two teaspoons salt.
Three medium tomatoes peeled and sliced, or one one-pound can tomatoes.
One-fourth teaspoon pepper.
One teaspoon dried basil leaves.
One-fourth cup butter or margarine.
One-half cup bread crumbs.

Prepare greased two-quart casserole. Turn unfrozen frozen cauliflower into casserole (in a single layer with the blocks of cauliflower side-by-side if casserole shape permits). Sprinkle cauliflower with one teaspoon salt, top with the tomatoes, the second teaspoon of salt, the pepper, and the basil leaves.
Cover and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) for 30 minutes.
Meanwhile, melt butter or mar-

Shrimp-Rice Skillet Dinner

There's a time saving tip to making this main dish. Rice and shrimp may be prepared in advance, wrapped in transparent plastic wrap and refrigerated until needed. It then requires only minutes to complete.

Shrimp Rice Dinner.

One-half cup butter or margarine.
One-half cup thinly sliced fresh mushrooms or one three-ounce can sliced mushrooms.
One-half cup chopped onion.
One tablespoon Worcestershire sauce.
Two cups cooked brown, wild or white rice.
One pound cleaned cooked shrimp.

Set temperature control on electric fry pan at 300 degrees. Melt butter or margarine; add mushrooms and fresh onions and saute until tender but not brown.

Add Worcestershire sauce and rice; toss to brown rice slightly. Reduce temperature to 250 degrees. Then add shrimp, heat thoroughly, about 10 minutes. Yield six servings.

Green Paella

During the Lenten season in Spain, a very simple version of the famous rice dish Paella is often served.

Saute a chopped onion in three or four tablespoons Spanish olive oil, along with a tablespoon of chopped pimiento and a garlic clove. When onion is tender, add one cup rice, stir to coat with oil, then add one cup (eight-ounce can) tomato sauce and one and one-half cups water. Turn frozen cauliflower into warm serving dish and pour curry butter over. Top with lemon slices.
Yield: Six servings.

Serve with frozen fried fish fillets and French fried potatoes. Add green salad, strawberries with ice cream for dessert.

Almond-Citrus Sauce for Fish

Tender fillets of sole, cod or perch take on new interest when served with this tangy sauce.

To make it, saute slivered almonds in butter, add seasoning and cornstarch as a thickening agent, then the liquid. The liquid is lemon-lime carbonated beverage, made with natural flavorings from the skins of lemons and limes, chosen because it gives a zippy accent to fish.

SAYS COUNTY DISPUTE HAS NOT KILLED PROGRAM

The prospects for St. Louis county's legislative program in the Legislature are good, despite the eruption of a controversy among sponsors of the program, State Senator John J. Johnson of St. Louis county, chairman of the County Democratic Central Committee, said today.

Johnson expressed the belief that satisfactory compromises on the legislation would be reached when the county's bills are taken up by House committees this week and next.

He said he did not believe that the disagreement between County Council Chairman Russell A. Grantham and Representative F. Neil Aschemeyer of Olivette, both Democrats, was serious enough to jeopardize the program.

Grantham charged that Aschemeyer had endangered the success of the program by introducing legislation before the council had a chance to work out its legislative proposals. As a result, he said, there has been confusion over the county's aims, leading to opposition from some quarters.

Aschemeyer replied that he did not represent the council in the State Legislature, and said the bills he introduced constituted his views of the most practical way to solve the county's problems.

Two Bills at Issue.

At issue are two bills, one giving the county authority to impose a police tax and the other broadening the powers of the county council.

Aschemeyer's police tax bill would convey the taxing authority to the County Council directly through constitutional amendment. The bill broadening the council's powers would give the council control over annexations and incorporations through a constitutional amendment, and legislative power in the field of municipal services through both a constitutional amendment and an amendment to the county charter.

The council's proposals call for constitutional amendments requiring the submission to county voters of charter amendments on most of the new powers.

In the case of the police tax, the charter amendment would spell out in detail the amount of the tax, the formula for rebates to municipalities having their own police departments, and other related features. The amendment giving the council greater legislative power in municipalities would define the exact areas in which the council's authority would be extended. Control over annexations and incorporations was not included in the council's proposal.

Those who object to Aschemeyer's proposals say they are too general. They want the council's new powers spelled out in the legislation, and they want the proposals enacted by the voters rather than the council.

Johnson's Position.

Johnson said he thought that Aschemeyer's bills were probably the better approach to the problems, but added that as a practical matter he favored the council's versions because they do more to minimize objections, and therefore have a better chance of passing.

The council's versions of the police tax and broader powers bills were outlined to members of the city and county delegations to the Legislature, as well as other measures sponsored by the council, at a meeting last night at the Diplomat Motel, 433 North Kingshighway.

Grantham said the purpose of the meeting was to explain the county's problems and how its legislative program would help solve them. About 25 members of the Legislature and six members of the council attended the meeting, which Grantham described as "very worthwhile."

ASKS COURT WRIT DATING ASSEMBLY PAY BOOST JAN. 4

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 13—The Missouri Supreme Court was asked today to make the salary increase for state legislators effective as of last Jan. 4.

A petition for a writ of mandamus to force State Comptroller John W. Schwada to pay the increase was filed by Representative E. J. Cantrell of St. Louis county. Members of the Legislature raised their salaries from $125 to $400 a month at a special session last year.

The law contained an emergency clause which sought to put the new salary scale into effect Jan. 4, the date the law became effective. Schwada said the legislators must wait 90 days before getting the new scale. He was upheld by an opinion issued by the Attorney General.

SCOUT TROOP 50 YEARS OLD

Boy Scout Troop No. 2 at the Pilgrim Congregational Church, 826 Union boulevard, received its fiftieth annual charter yesterday.

Lawrence Scott, neighborhood commissioner of the West Scout District, presented the charter to the Rev. Dr. Allen Hackett, pastor, at church services. Troop 2 received its first charter in 1910, the year after the scout movement was founded.

Full Report of Moscow-Peiping Policy Clash Shows It Far More Acrimonious Than First Believed

Strong Possibility Soviet Has 'Leaked' Complete Version—Crisis Viewed as Most Serious for Communism Since Russian Revolution.

By EDWARD CRANKSHAW

Copyright, 1961, The London Observer.

LONDON, Feb. 13. A MAJOR BREAKTHROUGH in the West's knowledge of behind-the-scenes developments in the protracted struggle between Moscow and Peiping shows this conflict to have been far more violent, acrimonious and fundamental than had been evident.

A fully-documented report of the charges and counter-charges between Peiping and Moscow at the Moscow conference of more than 80 Communist parties in November and December last year, has been obtained from a satellite source. There is a strong possibility that it was a deliberate "leak" by the Russians.

It not only confirms the strained-state of Chinese-Soviet relations, in face of indignant Soviet denials, but also puts flesh on what was dismissed by many as an arid doctrinal debate.

THE DEBATE ITSELF, which reached a first climax at the Bucharest conference last June, and a second in Moscow at the close of the year, was the outward expression of the most serious crisis the Communist party has had to weather since the Russian revolution.

In the course of it Premier Khrushchev personally was accused by the Chinese of revisionism—a deadly sin—of mishandling the Polish and Hungarian revolts of 1956, and of sacrificing China in particular and the Communist movement in general in the interests of a Russo-American detente.

Khrushchev, in his most violent mood, accused Mao Tse-tung of being like Stalin, of being oblivious of any interests but his own, and of spinning theories detached from the realities of the modern world. In the end an agreed declaration was published, and in it the Russians had the upper hand. But the Chinese on many points reserved the right to differ.

THE QUARREL GOES BACK a long way. Some would say it goes back to the 1920s, when Stalin sacrificed the Chinese Communist party to Chiang Kai-shek; others would say to the immediate postwar years, when the Russians stripped Manchuria bare and gave no help to the revolutionary Chinese.

The Russians themselves, in a secret circular about the sins of the Chinese Communist party, dated June 21, 1960, tried to localize the quarrel. It began, they say, in effect, only when China started ignoring the letter and the spirit of the Moscow declaration of 1957, which said that war was not inevitable.

The Chinese, on the other hand, in a critically important and hitherto secret letter dated Sept. 10, 1960, insisted the differences started at the twentieth party congress in 1956 when, in his de-Stalinization speech, Khrushchev denied Stalin's "positive" role without any previous discussion with the "fraternal parties."

The Chinese objected strongly to Soviet mobilization against Poland in 1956 and also to an alleged Russian plan to have the Polish party collectively condemned by all Communist parties of the world.

THE LETTER DECLARES that there had been a sharp difference between China and Russia about the handling of the Hungarian uprising. At one time, the Chinese letter states, the Russians had decided to withdraw their troops; the Chinese had effectively intervened to stop them.

Be that as it may, the quarrel did not begin to take real shape until 1958, and it did not come out into the open until last year.

A fascinating aspect of the report is that its compilers did not discuss in any detail what we should consider the concrete points of difference, but concentrated on doctrinal issues, at first sight meaningless to us, but wonderfully alive to them.

Some of the concrete issues are serious enough. They range from the now notorious withdrawal of Soviet technicians from China last August (the reasons for this, it now appears, were that the Chinese were using them in a way the Russians did not approve of and that they were being doctrinally perverted by the Chinese) to Soviet reluctance to supply the Chinese with the atom bomb and, even more interestingly, the breakdown of a scheme for a unified Pacific naval command. (Moscow, it seems, was afraid that the Chinese would draw the Soviet Union into a war over Formosa.)

All these and many more issues were freely aired at the Moscow conference at the close of 1960, including strong Soviet objections to Chinese actions in India and Algeria. These, the Russians said, were calculated to destroy the confidence of the bourgeois world in the Communist desire for peace and to inflame Afro-Asian suspicions of international Communism. But the whole weight of the debate

RED NEWS AGENCY TASS CALLS RUSSIANS, CHINESE LOYAL ALLIES, BROTHERS

LONDON, Feb. 13 (AP).

THE Soviet news agency Tass today described the Russian and Chinese peoples as "sincere friends, loyal allies and brothers."

In a broadcast timed to mark tomorrow's eleventh anniversary of the Soviet-Chinese treaty of alliance and co-operation, Tass commentator Kharkov stressed the unity of the two nations.

"The historical destinies of the Soviet and Chinese peoples possess common features which are the basis of their cohesion," Tass asserted.

"Unity of purpose in the struggle for socialism and Communism, community of ideology, allegiance to the teaching of Marxism-Leninism and the principles of proletarian internationalism—all this still further cements the Soviet-Chinese alliance and friendship and makes them a force unequalled in mankind's history," said Tass.

Liao Cheng-chih, vice president of the Chinese Soviet Friendship Association, said at an anniversary rally in Peiping that "no matter what happens in the world, the Chinese people will remain forever the most faithful and most reliable comrades-in-arms" of Soviet Russia.

THE CONTROVERSIAL ISSUES are six in number:

1. Is war inevitable? The Russians, since the twentieth congress in 1956, say that times have changed since Lenin laid down the doctrine of the inevitability of war, and that it no longer holds. The Chinese say that war cannot be avoided, so long as imperialism exists.

2. Must local wars lead to general war?

Hope for Progress on Test Bar Raised by Moscow-Peiping Rift

By DANA ADAMS SCHMIDT

© New York Times News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.

NEW EVIDENCE OF DIFFERENCES between the Soviet Union and Communist China has produced a modest degree of optimism among United States officials preparing for the next round of nuclear test talks with the Soviet Union.

The talks are due to resume at Geneva March 21, with Arthur H. Dean heading the United States delegation.

Soviet-Chinese differences on grand strategy toward the West were spelled out in documents now in the hands of Western governments, it was disclosed this week end. Eschewing "co-existence," the Chinese appeared to be willing to run far greater risks of war than their Soviet allies.

OFFICIALS here are more and more convinced that the Russians are as anxious as the United States to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons-making ability. A firm test-bar agreement is expected, therefore, to revolve around the question of how much inspection the Russians are willing to concede in order to obtain the bar they want. When talks ended last August, the United States was holding out for a system of 180 check posts, of which 21 would be in the U.S.S.R. The Russians were offering 15.

A political problem confronting United States negotiators is that the longer the present tacit bar on tests persists, the harder it becomes to resume testing. The nation that ended the tacit understanding, now in force for 27 months, would be exposed to fierce criticism from all opponents of tests.

WHILE HESITANT to use the term "last effort" used by President Kennedy in the election campaign, United States officials at the same time feel growing pressure to put an end to a situation in which tests are suspended in effect on Soviet terms—without inspection. They are subjected also to growing pressure from members of the scientific community who feel that United States nuclear knowledge and skills are withering for lack of tests.

Technical preparations for the talks, including a review of all scientific calculations on detection of tests, are being directed by a panel headed by Jerome B. Fiske. Political preparations are in the hands of John J. McCloy, senior disarmament adviser to the Kennedy Administration and chief of the State Department's disarmament administration.

Urges Cabinet Rank Be Given To USIA Chief

Advisory Group Calls for Single U.S. Propaganda Agency.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.

THE UNITED STATES Advisory Commission on Information has renewed its recommendation that the Government's information, cultural and general education activities be controlled by a single agency with Cabinet status.

The five-man commission, in its sixteenth report to Congress, said the consolidation plan offered advantages in both economy and efficiency.

It recommended that the director of the United States Information Agency take part in Cabinet meetings and have direct access to the President. The new director of the agency is Edward R. Murrow, radio and television commentator.

The advisory commission urged an improvement in planning of information and education activities. It said the system of including public affairs officers as responsible members of the staffs of United States ambassadors abroad should be retained and strengthened.

MARK A. MAY, former professor of psychology at Yale University, heads the advisory group. Other members are Edwin D. Canham, editor of the Christian Science Monitor; Lewis W. Douglas, a former ambassador; Sigurd S. Larmon, board chairman of the Young & Rubicam advertising agency; and Philip D. Reed, former board chairman of the General Electric Co.

The commission was established by Congress in 1948 and has been reporting regularly on Government information activities since then.

In its assessment of the work of the USIA, the commission recognized that propaganda or information, in whatever quantity or of whatever quality, could not be "a substitute for United States foreign policies or for the domestic strength and stability of our country."

THE COMMISSION disagreed with suggestions that larger ap-

U.S. Aid Keeps Bolivia Afloat, Maintains Its Social Revolution

Nation Was First in South America to Break Back of Oligarchy, but Mismanagement Has Wrecked Economy.

This is another of a series of articles by a Post-Dispatch team investigating Communist infiltration in South America.

By RICHARD DUDMAN

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LA PAZ, Feb. 13.

JUDGED BY ORDINARY STANDARDS, the government of Bolivia is bankrupt economically and a failure politically.

Judging it by broader standards, however, the United States has seen fit to pour $165,000,000 in the country since 1952 in economic aid program that is the biggest in Latin America and the biggest per capita in the world.

In so doing the United States had helped keep afloat a true social revolution, the first in South America to break the back of the oligarchy. That is the class of wealth, ownership and power that has ruled most of the continent for the 400 years since the Spanish conquest.

Among the many so-called Latin American revolutions, there have been only three that really deserved the name—Mexico's in 1911, Bolivia's in 1952 and Cuba's in 1959. They were the only upsets in which the pattern of society was suddenly and thoroughly changed.

MEXICO, after years of turmoil, has consolidated its revolution and become one of the most stable countries of Latin America.

Bolivia has followed the Mexican pattern. It nationalized the major tin mines, by far the nation's chief industry. Under violent pressure from the campesinos, it freed these Indian farmers from the serfdom and broke up the big estates to give them land in a hurry. But it has refrained from exporting its revolution and has kept its national independence.

What has been the result after nine years of the revolution and $165,000,000 in American aid?

Combol, the Bolivian mining corporation, lost the equivalent of $7,000,000 to $10,000,000 last year in running the mines that are still the primary basis of the national economy. Production and net receipts are down 50 per cent because of deterioration and mismanagement. The government itself estimates the mines have 3000 surplus employees on the payroll.

Land reform cut many plots to uneconomical size. Title difficulties still make it hard for the newly independent farmers to get credit. As a result, the nation's capacity to produce food has dropped sharply at the same time that its capacity to pay for imported food also has fallen off.

Railroads, now run by the government, are saddled with 3000 surplus employees. Thirty of the system's 65 locomotives are not operating, because of inadequate maintenance. Politically, the government of President Victor Paz Estenssoro is being attacked bitterly from left and right.

THE COMMUNISTS control the most important unions of tin miners. They call frequent strikes and thus far have refused to give an inch toward eliminating surplus employees and taking other steps to make mining more efficient.

The left wing of the National Revolutionary Movement, headed by Vice President Juan Lechin, always pushes for immediate benefits and against efficiencies that might eventually bring the country to its feet.

The left wing, which includes some Communists in strategic places in the government, seems to be gaining influence. Its leaders continually pledge solidarity with the Cuban revolution and criticize American aid as helping only the rich.

An indication of their strength is that when the government recently distributed a violently anti-Castro pamphlet, it had to do so anonymously.

On the right, a group that calls itself the Auténticos, the Authentic National Revolutionary Movement (M.N.R.A.), was expelled from the main body three months before the last presidential election. Its leaders formed a new party dedicated to fighting the Communists and working for cutbacks in useless workers and other economies in the great state enterprises. They charge that Paz always gives

A Forgotten Amendment

It was refreshing to hear at last from a public officer in Washington—Gordon M. Tiffany, outgoing staff director of the Federal Civil Rights Commission—an appeal for enforcement of the Constitution's Fourteenth Amendment, which would subject states barring Negro citizens from voting, as some Southern states do today, to a proportionate loss of Congressional seats in the United States House of Representatives.

Failure to enforce the Fourteenth Amendment, passed by the Thirtieth Congress in 1868, is one of the most shameful blots on American history.

The Civil War had hardly ended when it became evident that a massive effort was under way to prevent the newly-freed Negro from achieving the rights he had in principle gained—particularly the right to vote.

The Fourteenth Amendment—bitterly opposed by many Southern states—was the Federal Government's answer.

That more than 100 years have passed and the law has never been enforced is almost incredible. But when one examines the successive defeats of the various efforts that have been made to enforce it, it is disillusioning to find that in almost every case the opposition included far more than just spokesmen of the South.

The fact is, any evasion of justice has always led to more.

From the flouting of the Fourteenth Amendment have come many cynical alliances in Congress to defeat unwanted laws. Politicians in the North have been quick to see how this Southern balance of power could be used by reactionary groups from both regions, to bottle up and defeat badly-needed reforms.

So they have helped defend the continued existence of these padded Southern delegations. Year after year these overstuffed delegations have come from the South to sit in the House of Representatives—in seats to which many of them had no constitutional right whatever by voting apportionment—to wield an increasingly powerful influence in the House and its committees.

That Mr. Tiffany has had the courage to point out this unhealthy situation, and the legal, tailor-made cure that exists ready for use, should be cause for rejoicing by every supporter of civil rights.

He deserves our thanks and congratulations for taking the trouble, in the last busy days of his office, to bring this important amendment out of its undeserved retirement.

Let us hope that the new Congress will make good use of his recommendation, in fulfilling its pledge to give every American a vote!

Mary Hays Weik

The Price Fixers

Your editorial, "Judgment at Philadelphia," has confirmed my belief that at least one newspaper in St. Louis is cognizant of some intelligence in the reading public.

Far too often, all the public hears or reads is, "Union demands are the cause of high prices, inflation, and ruining our foreign market."

If this had been the electrical unions or their officials who were found guilty of "price-fixing and bid-rigging," we would have expected huge black headlines, and tones of editorials, telling us how our hard-earned dollars are being stolen from us.

The prestige of the criminal should never regulate the import of the crime. Dorothy E. Meagher

What St. Louis Needs

It is hoped that the traffic experiences of the past few days have convinced the most skeptical citizens that metropolitan St. Louis needs a good, all-weather rapid transit system—subways—and not more un dependable expressways.

The State's Good Work

Doubtless thousands of people would like to join me in thanking those dedicated men of the State Highway Department who have so beautifully kept both the Express Highway and Daniel Boone Highway open to traffic at all times through these trying weeks.

It was indeed a wrench to have to leave them for the plowed fields of the city streets on the way to work; but what a sigh of relief we gave when we got on them on the way home. One wishes that the city of St. Louis would attempt to emulate their fine example.

W. A. Albrecht

Name and address must accompany every letter, but on request will not be published. Letters not exceeding 200 words will receive preference.

Only by the Governor

Gov. Dalton has made such a splendid beginning at Jefferson City that we are tempted to hope he might undertake to right a wrong which only he can correct. Gov. Blair missed the chance to perform this great and lasting public service for Missouri. If Gov. Dalton does not undertake it, nobody else will. Thousands of dollars in future electric, gas, telephone and water bills paid by Missouri families may be at stake.

Missouri urgently needs from the 1961 Legislature, just as it needed but failed to get from the 1959 Legislature, a law clearly stating that in regulating the rates of public utilities, the Missouri Public Service Commission shall fix charges to yield a fair and reasonable return on capital actually invested, less depreciation. This is the "original cost" rule of rate regulation, which has been approved by the United States Supreme Court. It was followed for many years by the Missouri commission. It is so intrinsically fair, so eminently in tune with common sense, that Missourians may wonder why the Commission upon which they depend for protection from unreasonable rates ever departed from it.

The answer is that the Commission was required to change its rule by a decision of the Missouri Supreme Court. Three years ago, in a case involving the Missouri Water Company, the court ruled that in fixing rates the Commission must take into account, not only the original cost of the utility's plant, but its "fair value" as well. Last year the court reaffirmed this finding in a case involving the Union Electric Co. of St. Louis. These opinions have opened up a large hole in the fabric of Missouri rate regulation. Although little actual harm has yet been done in terms of excessive rates, much future harm can be done and, we believe, will be done unless the Legislature plugs the gap.

Well, why should not the Commission consider "fair value" as well as original cost? "Fair value" is a beguiling term. The trouble is that nobody can tell you what it is. In the Union Electric case, the Commission appears to have decided by some mystical averaging process that fair value is exactly half way between what the plant did cost and what it would cost if it were all built at today's prices. But why not a fourth of the way, or three-fourths? This is a shaky basis indeed for establishing utility rates. It is like saying that a person's weight shall be presumed to be half way between the actual weight and what his weight would be if he observed the diet he meant to observe.

In simple truth, there is no better way to determine a utility's rate base than to find out how much capital it actually invested in the property and plant with which it serves the public. Admittedly, much more will be invested now than was invested 30 years ago. Admittedly, utilities are entitled to earn enough to raise the capital required to make new plant investment at today's prices. But it does not follow that a concrete and calculable rate base should be abandoned for a foggy and nebulous one. Adjustments can properly be made from time to time in the rate of return which is deemed fair and reasonable, but it is never equitable to apply that rate of return to a base which includes fictitious, rather than actual, investment.

Missouri needs a law plainly setting forth these principles for the guidance of its public service commission. Why do we say only Gov. Dalton can provide the leadership for such a law?

The unpleasant truth is that the Legislature, as shown by the 1959 session, is too responsive to the wishes of the utilities' lobby to act unless it has the backing, prodding and active leadership of the Governor. State Senator Kelso Journey introduced such legislation in 1959, and valiantly fought for it. Not only did he fail to win passage of the bill, but when he came up for re-election he was defeated.

When the utilities lobby can show this much muscle against an individual legislator, other legislators understandably hesitate to invite similar reprisal. But we do not believe the utilities can intimidate the Governor of Missouri if he chooses not to be intimidated.

This is why we respectfully urge Gov. Dalton to take up a cause which only he can win—the protection of all Missouri's interest in fair and reasonable rate regulation.

Jobs Instead of Doles

In view of automation and the displacement of labor, a pilot project soon to be started at Belle Glade, Fla., under the auspices of the President's Committee on Migratory Labor, may benefit others than those intended. While training migratory farm workers in the operation of agricultural machines which are displacing many of them, it is planned in the long run to cut migration and raise living standards.

Local, state and federal agencies will, as a beginning, select 50 migrant families, determine their aptitudes for new jobs and then try to place them in suitable full-time work, either in agriculture or industry. An adult education program also will be established to train migrants for new jobs. Various social services will be arranged to expedite this transformation.

If the Belle Glade project works out, similar programs will be established elsewhere. Surely this scheme can be adapted to the needs of people trapped in areas of declining employment. Like the migrants, these people prefer jobs to relief. And that is what this program is intended to provide.

A Group of Experts

President Kennedy has selected a top-flight team of advisers to study the machinery of government and make recommendations for improving it. He was fortunate in obtaining the services of Robert A. Lovett, a New York investment banker, as a member of the four-man group. Mr. Kennedy wanted Mr. Lovett for a top Cabinet post, but Mr. Lovett was unable to consider accepting because of his health. Mr. Lovett is a former Secretary of Defense and a former Under Secretary of State; he knows the government's problems intimately.

The other appointees also are first-rate. Richard E. Neustadt, professor of government at Columbia University, has been Mr. Kennedy's special consultant on organizational problems and also has been advising the Senate subcommittee on national policy machinery. Don K. Price, dean of the graduate school of public administration at Harvard, has been a recognized expert on government organization for years; he edited a recent American Assembly study on the Secretary of State. Sidney Stein Jr., a Chicago investment counselor, is a former budget bureau official.

In naming the new advisers Mr. Kennedy abolished a committee named by President Eisenhower and another appointed by President Truman. Government organization is a field in which a President needs advice from persons in whom he has particular confidence. Also, since government is not a static institution, a fresh look is needed regularly. If ways can be found for making government more efficient, they should not be overlooked.

A Bargain, Not a Burden

It is no staggering surprise that Representative Mills of Arkansas declined the invitation to sponsor President Kennedy's old-age medical insurance proposal in the House. After all, he was one of the six Southern Democrats who joined 10 Republicans to bottle up similar legislation in committee last year.

As a matter of protocol he was asked to introduce the bill since he is chairman of the Ways and Means Committee to which it probably will go. But just as last year's measure was sponsored by Representative Forand, then the second ranking Democrat on the committee but now retired, the new bill will be offered by Representative King of California. He now is in the No. 2 spot. As an able and ardent believer in the insurance plan, the Administration feels fortunate to have him lead the fight for it.

The chief concern of Representative Mills is taxation. He has long advocated the plugging of loop-holes—without sensational success—to bring in more revenue at lower rates. No doubt this has been his way of reconciling the fact that Arkansas, one of the more backward states, needs federal help, with his natural antipathy to higher taxes. And there is logic in his position.

It will be unfortunate, however, if he joins the opponents of the health insurance plan because it involves an increase of one-fourth of one per cent in the Social Security tax. This charge is not a tax in the ordinary sense. It actually is a premium paid during working years for the assurance of adequate health care in old age. It is not a burden, but a bargain.

The inadequate "pauper" health bill passed at the last session should have been more objectionable to Mr. Mills since its costs are met out of general revenue. It may be argued by humanitarians that all of us should contribute to the care of the needy. Nevertheless, it remains a fact that benefits under the President's proposal will be paid for by those who are to receive them. So it is unfair to oppose it on the false ground that it is a burden on taxpayers in general.

No Rose-Colored Glasses

President Eisenhower did not leave his rose-colored glasses in Washington, at least not for Douglas Dillon. So the new Secretary of the Treasury has not been able to see the 1961 budget as Mr. Eisenhower did. He sees a billion dollar deficit where the former President a little more than three weeks ago saw a $79,000,000 surplus.

The difference is explained easily enough. Mr. Eisenhower over-estimated income and underestimated expenditures. Tax receipts will be about $500,000,000 less than expected, and there seems to be little chance that Congress will boost postal rates as Mr. Eisenhower had hoped. And spending will run about $300,000,000 more than he said, largely because he ordered a speed-up in the placement of defense contracts.

In itself, this dip into the red would not be too serious, even if it suggests that President Kennedy may find it harder than anticipated to stay within the 1962 Eisenhower budget. It is the decline in tax receipts, reflected in the budget figures, which is disturbing since this stems directly from the business slow-down. Unless the economic pace can be quickened, there will be more demands on the Government and less income with which to meet them. The state of the budget reflects the state of the nation. Fortunately, President Kennedy refuses to see that through rose-colored glasses.

New Direction for FTC

Paul Rand Dixon's nomination to the chairmanship of the Federal Trade Commission by President Kennedy is interpreted as a move suggested by Senator Kefauver of Tennessee in an effort to get something done about administered prices. The term "administered prices" is a relatively new one in the anti-trust field. It means prices set by the leading companies in an industry and automatically followed by the rest of the industry out of fear of punishment for nonconformity. It does not involve overt collusion or provable conspiracy.

Senator Kefauver as chairman of the Antimonopoly Subcommittee of the Senate has sent voluminous testimony and reports on administered pricing to the FTC and the Department of Justice without result. He is reported to want a court test of the practice under a general section of the FTC Act prohibiting "unfair methods of competition and unfair or deceptive acts or practices." Mr. Dixon has for four years been general counsel of the Kefauver subcommittee and earlier was with FTC; Senator Kefauver is said to believe that he would launch the long-awaited legal assault on administered pricing.

There can be no doubt that a great deal of what Senator Kefauver calls administered pricing goes on. One company or a few companies can possess a retaliatory power so great that they do not need to exercise it, to threaten to exercise it, or even to mention it. Smaller companies in their field are kept in line by the instinct that it would not be healthful to tangle with them.

But if the term "administered pricing" is somewhat vague, the practice is even vaguer. It transcends the realm of demonstrable fact. Perhaps something is to be said for a court case to clarify, if not settle, this twilight zone of monopoly practice. But FTC will do well, we think, to bear in mind that it is on uncertain ground here.

The better course, we believe, is to prevent over-concentration of power within an industry, or to break it up when it has already occurred. If that course is vigorously followed, there can be little if any of the oppressive practice which has come to be known as administered pricing.

SINCE THE STATE SUPREME COURT MONKEYED WITH IT

The Coming Decision on Sunday Blue Laws

Supreme Court Will Rule on Growing Religious and Economic Issue

Richard Cohen in the Christian Century

For the first time in this century, the United States Supreme Court will hear arguments on the constitutionality of Sunday blue laws during its current term. The ultimate ruling looms as one of the court's most far-reaching decisions on the increasingly sensitive issue of separation of church and state in America.

Two of the test cases involve discount stores. Two involve Orthodox Jewish merchants whose religious beliefs compel them to refrain from secular activity on Saturday, the Jewish Sabbath. They have attacked Sunday-closing laws (one in Pennsylvania, the other in Massachusetts) on the ground that any ban on Sunday business activity is discriminatory against persons who observe a day other than Sunday as their religious day of rest.

All four cases challenge the Sunday-closing statutes as religious laws violative of the First Amendment to the Constitution, which begins: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof. . . ."

For three centuries Protestantism was the sole guardian in America of the Christian Sabbath. In recent years the Catholic Church has become the new champion of the Sabbath.

How far Protestantism has moved on the Sunday issue since the formation of the Lord's Day Alliance may be judged by the fact that while the proposed Sunday-closing law exemption was under discussion in the legislature, the New York state council of churches distributed a statement, urging support of the bill, that had been adopted by the department of Christian social relations of the Protestant Council of New York and signed by prominent Protestant clergymen and lay leaders.

The statement noted that "this is not a relaxation of Sunday observance but an effort to give recognition to the rights of our fellow-citizens of other faiths."

—Post-Dispatch, July 17, 1955.

Despite their origins dating back to the earliest American colonies, state laws forbidding business and other activities on Sundays have never had a definitive test in the Supreme Court.

The last time the high court handed down a decision on this issue was in 1900, when it ruled that the State of Minnesota did not violate the federal Constitution in compelling barber shops to close on Sunday.

But this was before the Supreme Court held in 1934 that the guarantee of religious freedom and separation of church and state contained in the First Amendment had been made applicable to the states by the Fourteenth Amendment. Thus, the court has never handed down a decision on whether state blue laws violate the Constitution.

During recent years the high court has in fact consistently refused to review the increasingly numerous challenges to the blue laws of various states. In so doing, the court left the impression that the constitutionality of Sunday laws was so well established as to raise no substantial federal question.

One can only guess why the court has consented to give the issue a hearing at this time, but the decision of Judge Magruder holding the Massachusetts Lord's Day act unconstitutional in the Crown Kosh Supermarket case—plus a number of state court decisions outlawing such statutes on other grounds—apparently moved the justices to meet the issue head on.

The court has probably recognized too that Sunday commercial activity is now big business in America, with roadside discount house operations posing a powerful competitive threat to downtown and even suburban stores. This has apparently led such non-religious bodies as the National Retail Merchants Association to throw their full support behind Sunday-closing laws.

Three avenues appear open to the court in handing down its decision on the constitutionality of Sunday-closing laws.

It can uphold the full scope of the Crown Kosh Supermarket decision outlawing the Massachusetts blue law—and thus with one stroke wipe out all existing state and municipal ordinances regulating Sunday activities of business and entertainment enterprises.

Or it can sustain the United States district court decisions in the Braunfeld case in Pennsylvania (also involving an Orthodox Jew), which upheld the constitutionality of the state blue law. This would presumably put an end to the increasing amount of Sunday-law litigation.

Or finally, the court may hold blue laws unconstitutional as they affect persons who observe a day other than Sunday as their religious day of rest—but valid against others.

Whatever the decision, compulsory Sunday-closing laws would seem to be incongruous with the temper and tempo of the United States of America, circa 1960. Americans with record wages in their pockets, more time to spend them in and more automobiles to get them to the point of purchase than ever before do not appear likely to let Sunday laws continue to frustrate their acquisitive natures. Blue Sunday's future appears likeliest as America's dead-letter day.

Aid Is People From The Washington Post

"You Americans have perhaps three years to make contact with the people of my part of Africa," said the visitor from Tanganyika. "We need money for projects, yes, but money alone won't provide the kind of help we need most in my country or in the East African Federation which I hope will come about. What we really need is qualified individuals—teachers and technicians—to enable us to train our own people in efficient and democratic ways." As the visitor would be the first to acknowledge, this is not the whole problem or the whole answer, but it is a point too easily overlooked in the frantic search for big solutions. It is highly encouraging that the Administration recently announced plans to send 150 American teachers to four territories of East Africa.

Between Book Ends 'It Is a Real Political War'

THE KHRUSHCHEV PATTERN, by Frank Gibney. (Duell, Sloan and Pearce, 280 pgs., $4.95.)

Frank Gibney, news-magazine writer and editor who has been reporting the Cold War for 15 years, has compiled a comprehensive round-up of Communist activities and techniques of the past five years. Reports on all areas of the world, including Russia and its differences with Red China, show the Communists to be gaining and forcefully on the offensive.

The pattern displayed by Khrushchev is really one of flexibility and maneuverability. The Soviet leader's championing of "Peaceful Co-Existence" was occasioned, the writer says, by the possibility of mutual atomic annihilation, Russia's growing industrial and rocketry prowess, the rise of Red China, and the bankruptcy of previous Communist emphasis on violence and force. However, his aims, it is brought out, are still those of Stalin. Although Khrushchev has revised traditional Marxist dogma in denying that war is inevitable, he has not given up the use of force and violence, is merely holding them in reserve. The author has included an informative chapter on Soviet espionage activities.

On the balance sheet, Gibney lists inherent Communist weaknesses: doctrinal disputes, dissatisfaction in the satellites such as expressed in the Hungarian revolt, the desire of the Russian people for more worldly goods, and difficulties in selecting new leaders (Khrushchev is 66 and Mao Tse-tung 67).

However, the Free World, Gibney urges, must act instead of merely reacting to Red moves. It must begin by co-ordinating its own institutions, especially its economic ones, and it must pull in its belt to reassert its power base for peaceful competition. "It is the rocket-in-being, not the army-in-action," the author warns, "that can sweep the military-political chessboard."

He concludes: "Whatever we may say about the agreed futility of nuclear war, it is a real political war the Communists are waging now, whether it is fought in the form of incited riots, downed American planes, or trade pacts. The West would do well to remember that no army ever won a war by sitting safe in its trenches." Sam Lambert

DORIS FLEESON

Art of Political Press Relations

WASHINGTON. DEFENSE SECRETARY ROBERT S. McNAMARA is now on notice that while it is possible to roll a Ford off the assembly line in accordance with a blueprint, the art of political press relations is not an exact science. Within little more than two weeks of taking office he has qualified for the select club of Washington big wheels who thought that in a cozy little hour or two he could get better acquainted with veteran reporters and explain everything to them off the record.

But the first love of reporters is information, and McNAMARA's guests have fallen arches from patrolling the Pentagon aisles whereon he has barely scuffed his shoes. Hence the present furor over whether there is or is not a missile gap. It was always mired in politics and will be more so now. President Kennedy has been brought into it as is seeking publicly to calm the storm after privately wielding the White House paddle on his assortment of White House and Pentagon press agents.

He even spoke soothingly of the McNAMARA-type background press conferences. After all, he has used them to good effect himself and is still trying to maintain personal social contacts with old friends and Georgetown neighbors among the press.

Question of Security. He must be supported in his desire to breach the high and arid walls of official entertaining, but his method has inevitably put pressure on other reporters to show they, too, can get the news—and they will exert that pressure where they can.

Meanwhile, Republicans have been handed a propaganda weapon they have understandably been swift to use. Once more, too, it is difficult to get at the facts, since no record exists of the McNAMARA conference. Always in such areas the security question is involved.

Furthermore, precise language is of the utmost importance. To say that a missile gap exists between the United States and WASHINGTON. Russia is not to say that this nation is militarily weak. This is what President Eisenhower chose to stress. He pointed to the Strategic Air Force, short-range missiles stationed around the world, and other components of United States military strength. He rightly added them up to powerful deterrent striking power.

Weapon of Future. But the long-range missile is the weapon of the future, and this country would be a lot safer if it had more and better ones. Nobody can be sure the Russians don't have more and very good ones, and the evidence suggests they have.

With the possible exception of a few Atlas missiles, a number of the Navy's Polaris are the only intercontinental ones on station and ready to shoot.

Democratic Apprehension. The Minuteman is a sensational success but it has just been tested and it will be at least a year until it is fully operational. The Titan is also being tested with the hope it can be ready this year.

Democrats who voiced apprehension about this situation were not talking through their hats. President Kennedy has made a steadfast declaration that no conclusions have been reached in the four McNAMARA studies now under way.

Experienced Visitor. His problem is a March 1 deadline; if the Eisenhower defense budget is to be altered in any significant way the studies must point the way by that date. Social Note: An early caller at the Pentagon to express sympathy for McNAMARA was Louis Johnson, a Truman Secretary of Defense.

Johnson will be fondly remembered by connoisseurs of such incidents as dealt with above.

DIXIELAND EVENSONG DRAWS FULL CHURCH

Jazz Performance of Hymns, Spirituals Gets Mixed Reaction.

(Picture in Everyday Magazine.)

A Dixieland band playing spirituals and hymns substituted yesterday for the regular Sunday sermon at Episcopal Evensong services at Christ Church Cathedral.

The unusual service drew an unexpectedly large crowd estimated at 1300 persons, as well as a mixed reaction.

Said one woman as she left the cathedral: "I was filled with joy and religion."

Said another: "I'm tolerant enough to hear 'The Old Rugged Cross' played that way only once."

By "that way" she meant in the jazz style of Singleton Palmer and his Dixieland sextet, a fixture at Gaslight Square. Attired in dark blue suits, the musicians played for about 35 minutes at the place in the service where the sermon usually is heard.

Their program included "Joshua Fit the Battle of Jericho," "Rock of Ages," "The Old Rugged Cross," "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "O, For a Closer Walk with Thee," "Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen," "When the Roll is Called Up Yonder" and "Go Down Moses."

Last-minute arrangements for additional chairs had to be made when the pews became filled 30 minutes before the start of the service. Some persons were unable to find a seat and left.

Persons of all ages attended. Many could be seen with feet tapping and heads swaying to the rhythm of the music. The Rev. Standrod T. Carmichael, Canon Missioner of Christ Church, who conceived the idea and introduced the band, clapped his hands softly from time to time as the band played.

The Rev. Mr. Carmichael explained earlier that inviting Palmer and his band to play at the service is "part of the search for new ways in which people can communicate with the church and its message." Another church official said the idea probably will be repeated.

Members of the band, in addition to Palmer, who plays the bass horn, are Gus Perryman, piano; Lige Shaw, drums; Leon King, trombone; Norman Mason, clarinet; and Bill Martin, trumpet.

ISRAEL STILL DANGER SPOT, LASKOV SAYS

Despite relative quiet on the Israeli-Egyptian border, the continued arms race and blockage of the Suez canal to Israeli shipping makes the Middle East a potentially explosive area, the former chief of staff of the Israeli Army, said here last night.

In addition, President Nasser now parcels out hate and creates mischief in The Congo and other newly-emerged African nations," Gen. Chaim Laskov said. Laskov was the principal speaker at a "Bonds for Israel Dinner" at the Chase Hotel.

Gov. John M. Dalton was the guest of honor at the dinner, marking the thirtieth anniversary of Israel. Other guests included United States Senator Edward V. Long, Mayor Raymond R. Tucker, Missouri Attorney General Thomas F. Eagleton, State Treasurer Milton Carpenter and former Governor James T. Blair.

"The ideals of Israel are those upon which the very foundation of the world must stand if it is to survive at all," Dalton told the more than 600 persons attending the banquet. The Governor received the Israel Friendship Award for "his distinguished leadership in strengthening the ties of mutual understanding and friendship between the people of the United States and Israel."

The award was presented by Morris A. Shenker, St. Louis attorney and chairman of the bonds committee, who added: "His warm and sympathetic support of the rebuilding of Israel is an invaluable source of inspiration to all men of good will."

Dalton said he well understood the problems in a country "surrounded by 40,000,000 hostile people who have sworn" to destroy it. "We become disturbed when a little island like Cuba, with its sabre-rattling dictator, thumbs his nose at us," he continued.

Laskov, who resigned his post last Jan. 1, said his resignation was "purely a customary procedure" and carried no political overtones.

WORKS OF ST. LOUIS COMPOSERS PLAYED

Music by Wykes and Sasonkin in Program at Washington U.

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN

A concert of brass and wind music played last night at Graham Memorial Chapel on Washington University campus gave favorable prominence to works by Robert Wykes and Manus Sasonkin, both St. Louis composers. The performing ensemble, which was conducted by Clark Mitze, was composed of professional and student players.

The Wykes Concertino for Piano, Woodwinds and Percussion seemed ruminative to me and dependent largely on color and dynamics in the first two thirds of its progress. In the closing section the music was seized by a strong rhythmic thrust and carried through to a rousing conclusion. Shirley Parnas Adams was the piano soloist.

The Sasonkin Divertimento for Wind Orchestra balanced two active sections against a slow, reflective middle part. Though quite free harmonically, the divertimento was expertly made and emotionally expressive.

The first movement, starting with a fugato on a brightly melodic theme, was ingeniously constructed while the slow movement made effective use of contrasting timbres and odd, well exposed harmonies. The concluding section also had a brisk motion and a strong impact.

The works of both St. Louis composers were enthusiastically applauded.

Two charming songs by Gardner Read were sung by the soprano, Rosalyn Wykes. The program also contained Stravinsky's Symphonies for Wind Instruments and shorter works by Dukas and the Seventeenth Century Italian master Gravanni Gabrieli.

Graham Chapel with its hard interior surfaces is hardly an ideal place for a brass concert. Mitze proved to be a deft hand at keeping the sonorities well balanced and blended. The ringing in one's ears was held to a minimum.

He was pronounced dead at St. Mary's Hospital. About 445 persons were attending the church service.

He was called to the church here in April 1938, after serving for 11 years as pastor of Bonna Memorial Presbyterian Church in Chicago. Before he answered the call here, Memorial Presbyterian Church had been without a pastor for almost two years.

A graduate of the University of Chattanooga (Tenn.) and the Presbyterian Theological Seminary at Louisville, he received a doctor of philosophy degree from a Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville. He also received an honorary doctor of divinity degree from the University of Dubuque (Ia.).

The Rev. Dr. Noble, who lived at 321 Gascony Way, Warsaw Woods, formerly was pastor of churches in Louisville, Chattanooga and Philadelphia.

Last year, he and his wife made a two-month tour of Europe, Africa and the Near East where they visited several Presbyterian missions.

West's Sharp Rebounding Helps Lakers Down Hawks, 105-95

Guard Has 24, Pettit Grabs 25 Off Board

By John J. Archibald

The Los Angeles Lakers' Jerry West, a 6-foot-3 rookie guard, caused no little embarrassment among the Hawks yesterday.

As a major factor in the Lakers' wide edge in rebounding, West was the topic of much conversation in the Hawks' dressing room, following their 105-95 National Basketball Association defeat by the Lakers at Kiel Auditorium. By charging the boards while his teammates blocked out the taller St. Louis players, West totaled 24 rebounds.

The Hawks had somebody better. Workhorse Bob Pettit refused to be blocked and he battered his way through to grab 25 balls off the boards. But there was little else.

"It could be said that Lovellette and West had 25 rebounds between them," commented Hawks Coach Paul Seymour, with a wry grin. There was the feeling that the coach was not entirely satisfied with the work under the boards of 6-foot-9 Clyde, who was credited with one rebound during his 30 minutes in the nationally televised game.

But if big Clyde was shy, he was not alone as the Hawks suffered their third home court defeat in 27 games this season. St. Louis collected just 64 off the boards, compared to 87 for the visitors.

Good Work by Hawks.

West was one of two players named by Laker Coach Fred Schaus as having improved so much since the first of the year that the Los Angeles club has begun to play winning ball on the road and at home. The other was Tom Hawkins, a 6-foot-5 forward from Notre Dame, who is in his second season in the N.B.A.

"Hawkins did an excellent job of guarding Pettit," said Schaus. "Bob scored 20 but Hawkins had 16 himself. Any time you can stay within four points of Pettit, I'm satisfied."

There was the feeling that the Lakers, although 11½ games behind St. Louis and with no hope of nosing the Hawks out for the Western Division title, would again be a headache in the playoffs. To both the Hawks, of course, they must still gain a spot in the preliminary playoff and win it in order to play for the right to meet the Eastern Division champion.

In 1959 the Lakers upset the Hawks in the playoffs and last spring they came very close to doing so.

The Laker triumph Sunday was the third in the last four meetings with the Hawks. It reduced St. Louis' edge in the season series to 7-5.

Baylor Still Big Gun.

While it may well be the improvement of West and Hawkins that has turned the tide for the Lakers, the L. A. club's chief threat continues to be Elgin Baylor. Sunday Baylor was cold in his shooting, sinking just 12 shots in 38 attempts, but he still led the game's scorers with 31 points. The broad-shouldered, 6-foot-5 forward also picked off 17 rebounds.

Just as in Saturday's TV game with Cincinnati, the Hawks fell into early trouble against Los Angeles. They trailed 47-43 at halftime, but few among the 7816 spectators were really concerned. Only Boston was able to beguile the Hawks at home previously.

When Coach Seymour's crew overtook the visitors in the second quarter and pulled ahead, 61-56, halfway through the session, it appeared that they were following the script.

The hustling Lakers were in no mood to be counted out early, though, and they quickly regained the lead. Los Angeles led 80-73 at the end of the third quarter and throughout the final period they always had a fairly comfortable edge.

Cliff Hagan was the Hawks' high point man with 25 and Lovellette totaled 24.

Los Angeles had no Big Three to match that, but it had a Big Five that outscored all the Hawks put together. The combination of Baylor (31), West (17), Rudy LaRusso (17), Hawkins (16) and Frank Selvy (16) made 97 points to the Hawks' team total of 95.

Len Wilkens, who had scored a total of 54 points in his two previous games, had four. Si Green had 12, Johnny McCarthy 2.

"To let their small men go in for rebounds as they did the Lakers had to insult our guards," said Seymour.

Unfortunately it was a day when discourtesy paid off.

Gonzales Defeats Buchholz

Earl (Butch) Buchholz was no match for the master, Pancho Gonzales, and the 20-year-old St. Louis slipped a little deeper into last place in the won-lost standings of the pro tennis troupe yesterday. Gonzales scored an 8-3 victory over Butch in the matches that followed the Hawks-Lakers basketball game at Kiel Auditorium.

In other matches, Andres Gimeno defeated Alex Olmedo, 8-6. Barry MacKay topped Lew Hoad, 8-6, and the Buchholz-Gonzales team defeated Gimeno-Olmedo, 6-3, in doubles.

Gonzales and Gimeno remain tied for the lead with 13 and 9 records. Hoad, Olmedo and MacKay all have 11-11 and Buchholz is 7-15.

Referring to the $50,000 contract that Buchholz signed, promoter Jack Kramer explained that this is a guarantee for three years. If Buchholz does not win the difference at the end of the three-year period.

"If Butch, who I feel has great promise of eventually being a top pro, should finish last in this 50-match series, he will receive $7500," Kramer said. "I would then expect him to join another of my tennis groups, probably one making a tour of South America, and he would have a chance to win more money."

Asked why his troupe had decided to play as an added attraction at two Hawks' games whereas in previous years the pro tennis show was a separate attraction, Kramer replied that he did this because St. Louis tennis people had shown no interest in co-sponsoring the matches as they had in the past.

"We were very pleased to get the offer from Ben Kerner," said Kramer. "It looked as though we were going to have to skip St. Louis this season. This way we were guaranteed expenses and it enabled us to let many youngsters see what pro tennis is like." J.J.A.

St. Louis skaters tallied 23 points to finish fourth in the Land O' Lincoln ice skating meet Saturday at Champaign, Ill. United Commercial Travelers of Champaign finished first with 93 points, Glen Ellen of Chicago was second with 38, and North Brook, also of Chicago, was third with 35.

Keith Meyer of Chicago won the senior men's title and Don Helm, another Chicago skater, captured the intermediate boys' honors.

Seymour Fails to Make Point

Hawks' Coach PAUL SEYMOUR has a few words with Referee SID BORGIA but is overruled by N.B.A. official in second half of game against Lakers at Kiel. The Hawks already had taken exception to a Borgia ruling in the second quarter and, after the game, announced they were filing a protest.

Hawks Protest Game On Borgia's Ruling

Ben Kerner caught Referee Sid Borgia in a rule-book lapse yesterday and the Hawks' owner plans to make the most of it. Because Borgia did not assess a technical foul against the Los Angeles Lakers after a second-quarter infraction, Kerner announced that the basketball game had been played under protest.

After a time-out the Lakers' Jim Krebs, a 6-foot-8 center from Webster Groves, entered the game without notifying the official scorer. Borgia was told of the violation immediately, but after a brief discussion, he signaled the game to proceed.

Seymour learned of the protest after it had been filed.

Lakers Have Depth.

As an indication of the Lakers' depth, Coach Fred Schaus's team was able to dominate the Hawks in the opening quarter without using Rudy LaRusso, who has a 14.1 season average, or Rod Hundley, who has a 12.3 mark.

The team that started was Elgin Baylor and Tom Hawkins at forward, Ray Felix at center, Jerry West and Frank Selvy at guards.

Commenting on the fact that he was able to cope with the Hawks with LaRusso and Hundley on the bench, Schaus said, "I admit it is a pretty comfortable feeling."

Schaus said that Selvy, a former Hawk, has been consistently good on defense for the Lakers this season, although his scoring has tended to be hot and cold. He has a 9.2 season average.

There will be a doubleheader at Kiel Auditorium tomorrow night, with Los Angeles playing the Boston Celtics in the 7 o'clock game and the Hawks taking on Detroit in the nightcap. J. J. A.

Duchesne Wins No. 15 in Basketball

Duchesne High of St. Charles ran away from Corpus Christi in the first quarter and went on to win, 79-57, Sunday in a non-league prep basketball game on the winner's court.

Duchesne, now 15-7 for the season, outscored the visitors 21-8 in the first quarter. DUCHESNE 79, CORPUS CHRISTI 57.

Corpus Christi—Ray Cody 0, Bob Varrel 2, Tom Findlay 26, Jim Varrel 2, Bill Pooge 7, Jim Barry 4.

Cousy Says He's Had Enough

BOSTON, Feb. 13 (AP)—The fabled Boston bench—one of the chief reasons the Celtics have dominated the National Basketball Association in recent years—soon may be playing as much or more than the regulars.

One reason: Bob Cousy has had it.

"I'm beat," the weary Celtic captain said after Boston's 136-125 triumph over Philadelphia yesterday. Bob is 32 years old, is playing his eleventh season with the Celtics.

"I've never felt like this—physically and mentally—before. Never," the perennial all-star guard emphasized.

"I guess it's a combination of things. I haven't been well physically. Then there's all the travel. And we broke the race open too soon."

"I can't get up for a game when it doesn't mean much. I have to have something to shoot for," he said.

And the Playoffs?

Perhaps, Cousy said, things may be different in the playoffs, but he questioned his value for the rest of the season.

"Maybe the playoffs will be different," he said. "I hope so. I'll have a goal then, something to work for. It's always been different in the playoffs. Maybe it will be again."

Bill Sharman, Cousy's 34-year-old partner in the backcourt, took a different tack.

"What can you do in 20 minutes?" he asked. "I don't want to say anything against anyone, but I'm not playing as much as I used to. I've always thought you play better after you get your second wind. How are you going to score much in 20 minutes?"

Coach Red Auerbach, advised of the comments of his veterans, made a vague motion of dismissal.

"Aw," he shrugged. "No comment. Look, we won. That's what I care about. We won."

And it was his bench—swift Sam Jones in particular—that had a big hand in fashioning the Celtics' fifth victory in nine meetings with the Warriors.

Jones Has Answer.

Jones, who has keyed the four previous victories over Philadelphia, came off the bench to lead a second period rally that decided the issue.

He scored 15 points in the second quarter and assisted on four other baskets as Boston overcame a 36-28 deficit and soared to a 66-56 half-time lead that stood up the rest of the way.

The victory broke a three-game Celtic losing string and gave them a 6½ game Eastern Division bulge over Philadelphia. And, with Los Angeles 105-95 victory over St. Louis, it gave Boston a three-game edge in the loss column in the race with the Hawks for the best win-loss record.

Syracuse punished Detroit 148-122 and Cincinnati edged New York 105-104 in other games. Saturday, the Knicks took Boston 129-107. St. Louis beat Cincinnati 123-122 and Syracuse romped over Detroit 141-111.

Friday—South Carolina at North Carolina.

Saturday—Ohio State at Iowa.

Buckeyes to Meet Iowa in Big Ten; Cincy Plays Wichita

NEW YORK, Feb. 13 (AP)—The big conferences, which furnish the bulk of the field for the 25-team N.C.A.A. championship tournament, tonight move into what could be a straightening-out week in college basketball.

Key pairings are spread throughout the schedule all week, with the Big Ten, Big Eight, Southeastern and Ohio Valley conferences first off the mark in games that will help fill the N.C.A.A. lineup and the National Invitation Tournament as well.

Ohio State's top-ranked Buckeyes, needing the Big Ten title to qualify for defense of their N.C.A.A. championship, are home tonight against Northwestern—seeking to stretch their winning streak to 24 before moving to Iowa City for Saturday's showdown with second-place Iowa.

Iowa, still kicking despite the loss of four regulars because of poor grades, is home to Wisconsin tonight. A victory for both the Bucks and Hawkeyes would put Ohio State at 9-0 and Iowa at 6-1 for their Saturday collision.

In the scrambled S.E.C.—Kentucky a mediocre Wildcat that year — challenges Mississippi State, the conference leader with an 8-0 record, a nine-game winning streak, and a 16-3 over-all mark. At the same time, S.E.C. runnerup Vanderbilt (6-2) is at L.S.U. with the game taking on added importance because Mississippi State will not go into the N.C.A.A. tournament if it wins the conference. State, like two years ago, will pass up the N.C.A.A. under an unwritten state law forbidding competition against Negroes.

Also tonight, Kansas and Kansas State resume their duel for the Big Eight title. Ohio Valley Conference leader Western Kentucky is at second-place Eastern Kentucky, and in a big eastern duel—second-ranked St. Bonaventure (18-1) plays N.I.T.-bound Providence (16-3).

Kansas State is at Colorado and Missouri at Kansas with the Wildcats and Jayhawks currently sharing first place with 6-1 records. Western Kentucky is 7-0 and Eastern Kentucky 6-2 for their O.V.C. duel.

The remainder of the week is just as active with these matches to watch: Tuesday—Texas Tech's Southwest Conference leaders at runnerup Texas A&M; Duke's Atlantic Coast Conference leaders at Wake Forest.

Wednesday—Duquesne at Dayton, a strong NIT possibility; North Carolina State at North Carolina, No. 2 team in the ACC. Thursday—Wichita (5-2) at Missouri Valley Conference leading Cincinnati (7-2); Utah, leader of the Skyline Conference, at Denver.

Friday—South Carolina at North Carolina.

Saturday—Ohio State at Iowa.

Best-Laid Plans

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—It was Derby week in Louisville, and Joe Palmer ticked it off this way: "Four springs ago (he wrote) two men, not now identified, laid plans which are about to come to fruition. One was planning the mating which would lead to the winner of the Kentucky Derby. The other was lighting a fire under the mash in the Brown-Forman distillery. Strength to them both."

This was keeping the focus where it belonged. There is, however, another way of approaching the topic. Four springs ago, owners of 12,000 or so thoroughbred mares in America had the same goal in view—to get a foal that would win the Kentucky Derby. Preakness and Belmont for the Triple Crown at three, and on at four to prove his greatness under top weight in the handicaps.

Nobody ever bred a horse in the hope of getting a bad one, yet the odds against getting a champion are 12,000-to-1. Of 11,159 thoroughbreds that got safely born and registered in 1958, some died before their second birthday, some were crippled and some couldn't or wouldn't run.

Wednesday of this week is closing date for nominations to the Triple-crown races of 1961. Out of all that great crop of 1958, there'll be about 150 whose owners still believe—wrongly in 149 cases—that they might take it all. When the lists are published, everybody concerned will be watching with special interest for one name—Bowl of Flowers.

Palm Queen

Bowl of Flowers was away off by herself as the best two-year-old filly of 1960. She raced eight times, won six, placed second twice and earned $198,706.25, generally starting late and running over her field at the end. By autumn the scholars were saying she could beat any colt of her age, and there was no dissent from that distinguished authority, Mr. G. E. Arcaro, after he won the Frizette Stakes with her.

Another who concurred is Jimmy Kilroe, whose annual Experimental Free Handicap is the closest thing we have to an official ranking of the new three-year-olds. In his list for 1961, Kilroe assigned 120 pounds to Bowl of Flowers, thus rating her second only to Hail to Reason, the champion colt that broke down during the summer. (Between Hail to Reason at 126 pounds and Bowl of Flowers, Kilroe listed the colts Carry Back and Pappa's All at 122, but Bowl of Flowers' five-pound sex allowance makes her assignment the equivalent of 125 for a colt.)

Now, the question is: Will Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane, who owns Bowl of Flowers, and Elliott Burch, who trains the filly, take last year's compliments seriously and challenge the colts for the Triple crown? or would they be wiser to slip in through the ladies' entrance and slap the girls around for a quarter-million or so?

On the one hand there is the chance for everlasting renown and $400,000 in added money—$150,000 in the Preakness, $125,000 each in the Derby and Belmont. On the other, there's the "Triple Crown for Filly" where Bowl of Flowers appears to have a lock on $250,000.

To the Ladies

The Triple Crown for distaff runners starts May 20 with the $50,000 Acorn at a mile, asks the girls to go an additional furlong for $75,000 in the Mother Goose at Belmont June 10, and winds up with Belmont's $100,000 Coaching Club American Oaks at a mile and a quarter, June 24. If one filly wins 'em all, she earns a bonus of $25,000.

Unlike the Big Three for colts, this is a triple crown in the classic pattern, where the distance increases with each succeeding race, as in England's Epsom Derby, St. Leger, and Two Thousand Guineas.

Yet for the owner of an outstanding filly, the temptation must be great to attempt something that has never been accomplished. Sonny Whitney couldn't resist it in 1959 when people were talking about his Silver Spoon the way they talk about Bowl of Flowers today. He put the filly in the Derby where she carried more weight and ran faster than the Celebrated Regret, the race's only female winner. Silver Spoon stumbled at the start, though, got slammed around in the scuffle for position, and finished fifth to Tony Lee.

Over 86 years, 29 fillies have started in the Derby and only Regret, in 1915, got back first. Two have won the Belmont, Ruthless, queen of the barbarous battalion, in the inaugural of 1867, and Tanya in 1905. The Preakness has celebrated ladies' day four times in 84 years, but not since Nellie Morse's victory in 1924.

Palmer Wins Playoff From Sanders in Phoenix Open

Arnold Shoots 67 For Round

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 13 (UPI)—Arnold Palmer won the $30,000 Phoenix Open golf tournament today when he defeated Doug Sanders by three strokes in an 18-hole playoff before 3000 fans.

Palmer, erratic off the tee but brilliant around the green, gained a three-up lead after 12 holes and then played it close to the vest. He carded an 18-hole score of 32-35-67. Sanders had 34-36-70.

It was Palmer's second playoff victory of the year. He defeated Al Balding in a sudden death event on the first hole to win the San Diego Open last month.

For the win, Palmer received first prize money of $4,300 plus one-quarter of the day's receipts which may run as high as another $2000. Sanders got $3000 plus the same share of the receipts.

Palmer, who won the National Open, Masters and six other championships last year, along with more than $75,000 in prize money, struggled all the way yesterday to get a par-70 to gain a 270 tie—climaxing the round with an eight-foot birdie putt on the eighteenth hole before about 13,000 fans.

Meanwhile, Sanders was trying to live up to a dream his wife had a couple of nights before. She dreamed that Doug would win the championship.

"But I didn't have any idea that I'd even come close when the round started," said Sanders. "I started eight strokes off the pace. I just wanted to shoot good golf and get up higher on the money list."

The good golf he shot was a record-shattering round of 62—eight under par. It was the first 62 of the year—and the first 62 on the P.G.A. tour since Billy Casper performed the feat at Indianapolis last summer.

Sanders had a phenomenal putting round. He rolled in one putt from 35 feet, had two from 15 feet, one from 10 and the rest of the birdies came from six feet or less.

Palmer was out in one-under-par 33 on the strength of a 12-foot putt on the sixth. He still had a two-stroke lead over defending champion Jack Fleck and three over Sanders with eight holes to go. He bogied the eleventh and twelfth holes and was even.

Then he came to the sixteenth and hit his tee shot into some bushes and drew a one-stroke penalty. He got a bogey there and thus needed a birdie on the 523-yard, par five eighteenth hole. He got home in two shots, about one foot off the grass. His lag putt was hit too strong and went about eight feet past the pin.

But he got the pressure putt down as Sanders watched in agony. Doug hasn't won a tournament since 1959—and this one he could have used without meeting Mr. Palmer in a head-and-head duel.

Fleck of Los Angeles came in with a 69 for a 271, good for third place $2000. Don January, Dallas, Tex., who picked up $50,000 for a hole-in-one last week, had a 272 after a closing 69 and got $1700.

Dave Marr, Sun City, Ariz., and Johnny Pott, Shreveport, La., each collected $1450 for 274s. But the big surprise was Jack Cupit, a 23-year-old out of Longview, Tex., making his first PGA tournament start. He had a 275 and tied for seventh place with Bill Collins, Crystal River, Fla., and collected $1250 for the effort—and probably is wondering how long this has been going on.

Birds Flock To Florida For Training

HOMESTEAD, Fla., Feb. 13—One player who failed to arrive in time for opening of the St. Louis Cardinals, preliminary training camp here today had a very valid excuse. Doug Clemens, whose home is at Leesburg, Pa., notified the club that he couldn't get out of town because of deep snow drifts. Leesburg is near Reading, Pa.

Twenty-three of the players due to check in for early training are members of the St. Louis club's rosters. The others of the expected 32 are attached to the Cardinal minor league teams.

Other winners were Donald Jackson of Oshawa, Ontario, in the men's singles, and the Canadian dance team of Virginia Thompson and William McDachin, both of Toronto.

Jackson's smooth, confident, artistic performance simply was too much for Bradley Lord, United States national champion from Boston. Lord skated well, perhaps better than he ever has, but he summed it up after the first day's compulsory figures, saying "This fellow's too experienced and too good for me." Lord finished second.

Trailing the Jelinks in the pairs was the American team of Maribel Owen, Laurence's older sister, and Dudley Richards of Boston. Donna Lee Carrier and Roger Campbell, both of Los Angeles, were the runner-up team to the Thompson-McDachin duo in the dance. United States national dance champions Dianna Sherbloom of Los Angeles and Larry Pierce of Indianapolis were a poor fourth.

Could Be Reversed. Some of the experts on hand were not overly impressed with Miss Owen's victory over Miss Griner, a determined little Canadian blonde who almost came from behind to make it a clean sweep for her country. They hinted the result could be reversed when the girls meet again Feb. 21, in the world championships at Czechoslovakia.

Canadians Take Three Of Four Skate Titles; U.S. Prospects Are Dim

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 13 (AP)—United States figure skating followers found little comfort in the past weekend's North American championships as Canadians skated off with three of the four titles at stake.

The truth is that Uncle Sam has one skater who may develop into a medal winner at the 1964 Olympics—16-year-old Laurence Owen of Winchester, Mass.

Miss Owen was the only United States winner in the North American, a biennial competition with Canada. Her margin over Canadian champion Wendy Griner in the women's singles was thin. Just as in the Olympic Games, there is no official team winner in the North American meet.

Things were so bad from a United States standpoint that the Canadian pairs team skated away with a crown despite the fact it shouldn't even have been on the ice.

From Hospital to Title. Maria and Otto Jelinek, sister-brother exiles from Czechoslovakia, were practicing their pairs routine Friday night when they fell. Maria was cut by Otto's skates on her right thigh. She bruised a hip and pulled a muscle. Otto was kayaked. Taken to a nearby hospital he was treated for a wrenched back, mild concussion and had three stitches sewed in a scalp wound.

Told by doctors not to skate, they said thanks for the advice—and then skated. Net result: One of the easiest victories of the two-day competition. The Jelinks added insult to injury by winding up their exercise with the eye-catching lift act that had precipitated their accident.

Other winners were Donald Jackson of Oshawa, Ontario, in the men's singles, and the Canadian dance team of Virginia Thompson and William McDachin, both of Toronto.

Bills, Facing 2 Home Games in Week, Aim For N.I.T. Meet Bid

By Harold Flachsbart

The excitement of Saturday night basketball melts like the snow when the sun shines on Sunday afternoons, and coaches also mellow a bit, with the season nearing a close.

JOHN BENINGTON of St. Louis U., naturally not happy after the Billikens' 69-54 loss to Bradley, was looking forward to two home games this week at Kiel. North Texas State will be here Thursday and Houston, an independent school in the N.C.A.A., will oppose the Bills Saturday.

"I knew we would have a tough time against Bradley without GORDIE HARTWEGER," said Benington. "But I guess the biggest disappointment was the loss for a homecoming crowd. . . . I understand Hartweg won't be released from the hospital (with a throat infection) until Wednesday or Thursday."

The two games this week will wrap up St. Louis's home schedule. Then come five tough contests on the road. The Billikens are eliminated from the Missouri Valley Conference race, which Cincinnati leads with a 7-2 mark as compared to a 6-2 record for Bradley and Wichita (5-2). "For the rest of the season," Benington said, "we'll be trying to get into the N.I.T. in New York, although they're not likely to go lower than third place in the conference. However, we've played a tough schedule and that will be considered when selections are made."

Reversal of Form. There was a difference between Friday and Saturday for Concordia Seminary's Preachers, who were swamped at Cape Girardeau by Southeast Missouri State, 92-72, and then came back ures, led by JIM ZWERNE-MANN, with 16.

Harris, now 16-4 for the season after victories last week over S.I.U. of Alton and Principia College, will find a tough foe in River Forest. Coach BILLY KEY realizes.

"We miss BOB LEONARD and GEORGE LEONARD," said Key, "but our team will be moving and we're going to be ready for the Chicago team."

Bears' Scoring Figures Up. Washington University's coach CHUCK SMITH said that the Bears' scoring average had climbed from 62 points a game to 74 since SANDY POMERANTZ began playing with the quintet. . . . Pomerantz, a transfer student from Cincinnati U., has competed in four games for the Bears (which they split 2-2). . . . Sandy is averaging 23.7 points a game.

Smith points out that four other Bears are averaging in double scoring figures, including KENT LATTIG, CHARLES STEGEMEYER, GEORGE STRECKER and ART SIDNER. Lattig is the only senior on the squad, which should be a good one next season, with experienced hands all around.

The Bears will play Wheaton College here Friday and Portland (Ore.) a week from tonight.

S.I.U. Wins Title.

Southern Illinois of Carbondale is one of the hottest teams in the country and undefeated champion in the Interstate Conference with 10 victories. HARRY GALLATIN's squad (18.3 over-all) also made big gains in both the United Press International and Associated Press small college ratings. It's a team that easily could win the N.A.I.A. tournament at Kansas City next month.

It's 'Showdown Week' in High School Basketball Races

Jr. Bills To Play Cadets

By Bob Ruhl

The second meeting between St. Louis U. High and Christian Brothers, the Old Reliabilities of state prep basketball action this week for what might be entitled "the seven days of showdown."

For the close observer or the armchair forecaster, who is looking for answers for the upcoming state tournament puzzle, this week should provide thrills. Several of the area's leading quintets play top opponents.

And Friday night at St. Louis U. High, where the cheering and chanting of "Go, Bills, Go!" begins shortly after the last class, the Junior Bills (15-3) and Cadets (12-4) renew their old feud.

Two weeks from tonight, the two quintets, state Class I finalists last season, will start up the tedious road toward a spot in the 16-team state finals at Washington, D.C. Each is aiming for its fifth straight berth in the tournament.

Little Bills Won First Game. The Little Bills, coming from behind, tripped the defending state champion Cadets, 60-59, on their first meeting on Jan. 20.

Both teams have other strong tests this week. The Cadets first must play highly regarded DuBourg (14-6) tomorrow night. St. Louis averaged an earlier defeat to DuBourg with a 74-65 victory Saturday.

Also on Tuesday the Junior Bills oppose Mercy (15-3), which suffered a crippling blow last week when Joe Mimilitz, one of its outstanding guards, broke a bone in his left hand. He is not expected to return to action before the regionals.

Soldan (10-4), after a week's idleness, plays Beaumont in a non-league game tomorrow night. The Tigers, looking for their first Public High League title in 20 years, play Hadley Tech (17-4) in a league headliner Saturday.

Madison (14-4) goes to Granite City (13-9) for an important contest. And Crystal City (18-1) seeks its nineteenth straight victory at Fredericktown.

ABC Title at Stake. On Thursday, Lutheran Central is at Alton to play Western Military Academy with the ABC League championship at stake. A victory would give Lutheran its third consecutive title. If Western wins, the two teams will share the honors.

Friday night, University City gets a chance to end Kirkwood's record, 20-1, the best in the St. Louis city-county area. Kirkwood can win the Suburban Big Ten League title with its sixteenth straight triumph.

Brentwood (15-2) and Lindbergh (13-3), the 1-2 teams in the South County League, will settle their difference. A Brentwood victory will give the Eagles the title.

DuBourg can clinch a tie for the Catholic Athletic Conference title by beating Mercy. But the Bulldogs, playing at home, are always tough and two of their three losses have been to DuBourg.

Waterloo (18-2) can assure itself of a tie for the Cahokia Conference crown by beating New Athens. Berkeley can gain a tie with Pattonville for the North County lead with a victory over Wellston. Belleville Cathedral can move closer to the Catholic League title by defeating Chamblaine.

Triad (21-0) finishes its regular season against Highland tomorrow and Roxana Friday. Collinsville (21-0) meets Wood River, Friday.

N.B.C. Basketball Meet Will Begin March 10

Will College is expected to defend its title in the Missouri tournament of the National Basketball Congress. Dates are March 10-11-12 and March 17-18 with action at night on Friday and Saturday and in the afternoon on Sunday.

Entry blanks and information can be obtained from Bob Reed, state commissioner, 538 Rosedale, St. Louis 12, Phone VO. 3-1284. Three gyms, Gamble, Tandy and Wohl, probably will be used.

Marquette 75, Vianney 49. Earl Gross accounted for 23 points and Bob Eichorn 17 as Marquette won from Vianney, 75-49, in a Catholic Prep League basketball game, Sunday. It was the fifteenth loss in 16 games for Vianney.

MARQUETTE: Eichorn 17, Hartman 8, Katter 1, Gross 23, Tandy 1, Jackson 21, Fennell 4, Rejoz 8, Holdan 2.

VIANNEY: Wuehls 11, Wright 11, Hardan 8, Sullivan 2, Tierney 11, Schneider 16, Cook 0, Moller 0.

Half time score: Marquette 32, Vianney 20.

Missouri Plays at Kansas U.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 13 (AP)—Kansas State or Kansas? Which will stand up under mounting pressure in the Big Eight Conference basketball race?

Both start the second half of the Big Eight schedule tonight with 6-1 league records after barely avoiding upsets last Saturday.

The K-State Wildcats had an especially close call in beating Iowa State, 66-65, at Manhattan, Kan., on sophomore Al Peitman's long fielder with nine seconds left.

Kansas' Jayhawks made only 10 field goals in beating Nebraska, 38-33, at Lincoln, Neb. They got off only 29 shots against the ball controlling Huskers but managed 11 free throws to Nebraska's 11. Nebraska took only 19 field shots, made 11 of them.

Tonight Kansas will entertain the Missouri Tigers, third in the standings after beating Oklahoma, 94-78, at Norman, Okla., for a 4-3 record.

Kansas State, which has a sports 15-3 season record and a No. 7 national ranking, plays Colorado in Boulder, Colo. If Wilky Gilmore, who sat out the last two games because of a knee injury, is ready to go near full blast, Colorado could upset the Wildcats.

Saturday the Jayhawks and 20 Wildcats change partners, Kansas meeting Colorado in Boulder and Kansas State going to Missouri.

Army, which has won 11 of its last 12 games, is rated one of the strongest court squads in West Point history. Its leading scorer is 5-10 Stu Sherard, who has averaged 18.5 points a game. Among others the Cadets have defeated Princeton, Villanova, Fordham, Penn State, Columbia and Pittsburgh.

McKinley had been top seeded and Palafox was second seeded. The tournament was among players from Trinity, Corpus Christi and Pan American universities, which have some top men on their squads. Palafox, for instance, was a member of Mexico's Davis Cup team last year. He now plays for Corpus Christi.

Dixieland at Vespers

Presiding over a religious and musical innovation in St. Louis, the Rev. Standrod T. Carmichael of Christ Church Cathedral stands in front of the high altar with the jazz musicians—Singleton Palmer and his Dixieland Six—who played at vespers yesterday. Taking up their instruments at the time usually given over to the sermon, Palmer and men played eight hymns and spirituals in classic Dixieland manner: dirge-like openings, belting closings. In group are Gus Perryman, piano; Leon King, trombone; Palmer, concert bass; Norman Mason, clarinet; Lige Shaw, drums, and Bill Martin, trumpet.

A Chocolate Cone After the Tears

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 13. DOWN TO THE CORNER ice cream place with the moppet today. Ice cream is very good for 5-year-olds. It is good for fathers, too.

Shopping the ice cream takes quite awhile—we always settle on chocolate or strawberry. But we take a long time making up our minds.

"How about the chocolate mint, son? Or a double scoop of the rocky road?" The fact that we KNOW what we are going to have makes no difference. We are like lady shoppers in the dress department. Half of the fun is just looking. I am an old ice cream shopper. Having got in the business in a curious way.

I shopped ice cream cones while interviewing lost tots for the dailies.

It is the curious opinion of editors (and I have given up trying to fathom THOSE minds). It is their curious opinion that a lost child eating an ice cream cone in the police station is of great national interest.

There is quite a bit of traffic in lost children—some of them become absolute professionals at the business.

I never knew a child to get lost at a decent time. It is usually just when you are a half hour from quitting time.

"Lost kid at Central Station," said the editor. "Be sure you get a picture of him eating a cone. And with the cop's cap on. Get a nice kindly looking cop feeding it to him. Get moving."

Children do not get lost without purpose. They are downtown with mama. Mama is shopping the white sales.

"It doesn't seem like much of a reduction to me," says mama to the saleslady. "Are you sure it's been marked down? What is the thread count? Ferdinand? FERDINAND! Where is little Ferdinand?"

Well, I can tell you. Little Ferdinand has become bored with thread counts. He has checked the action in the toy department and has now wandered into the street.

"An ice cream cone would surely go good," says little Ferdinand to himself.

With a cunning smile on his cunning face, he gives himself up to the nearest policeman.

"I'm losted, says little Ferdinand. He accepts a ride in the prowl car. And sits down at the station to await the arrival of the reporters with expense accounts.

I have really thought somewhat of teaching my own son this comfortable racket. How to get ice cream cones out of the free press.

I must say when I was hustling these tearful stories, I was pretty brisk with such conniving moppets.

"Here's your ice cream cone. Now, what's your name? And don't give me any lip. We got an edition to make in 15 minutes."

That is how I learned to shop cones.

Many an edition I missed by getting the wrong flavor. Children will sulk if you do not have the proper dip.

"That's vuhnulla. I want choklit."

"Listen," I said. "Eat up this cone for the picture. Then I'll get you a chocolate cone. Here, put the policeman's cap on your noggin."

"I want choklit," said the child beginning to tear up. "I don't like vuhnulla."

Out of these heart-rending sessions I learned a good deal about childish tastes. (If you have a little time, take a chance on chocolate. It is like type "O" blood at the blood bank. Usually works).

That is why we shop—shop carefully. We take little mental licks at all the open cans of ice cream. Then we wind up with chocolate and strawberry and content.

Ann Landers

No Hex on His Motor

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I used to go with a girl but dropped her because she got too spooky. This girl was sort of a spiritualist and she told me she'd put a hex on me for quitting her. I don't believe in evil spirits but this is what happened:

I'm a mechanic in a machine shop and I operate a seven horse-power motor. Since I left that girl the motor will not run. Being a mechanic I took it apart every which way and could find nothing wrong. I took it to two other mechanics and they can't explain it either. The motor will run in THEIR shops, but not in mine! My car has been giving me trouble, too. I can't get more than five miles to the gallon. I even changed carburetors but it didn't help. Can it be that she has cast a spell over my motors? How do you explain this? VAN.

DEAR VAN: No one has the power to cast a spell over anyone or anything. This is phony, voo-doo malarkey. "Spellcasters" shake people up by scaring them half to death. Scared people can't function as well as they should and when things go wrong they persuade themselves it's because of the "spell." I'm no mechanic, but I can tell you from here that there's something mechanically wrong with your motors. Trade them in on new ones. If something goes wrong with the new motors it will be attributable to more mechanical trouble . . . which would be a rotten coincidence.

DEAR ANN: How can a foolish 16-year-old girl patch up the damage she has done to a boy's feelings? Howie asked me to a big dance. I accepted. A few of the me-ow-ers at school said, "But isn't he shorter than you?" Well, he is (about three inches) but I never thought of it. He's a swell kid, brilliant student and so much fun.

When we got to the dance I began to feel self-conscious and said I had a blister on my heel. I'm sure he caught on. Because I danced with other fellows and he saw me. Naturally he had a bum evening but said nothing.

Now I could kick myself. I want him to ask me out again because I know I was stupid. Help me fix this! GIGI.

DEAR GIGI: Put on your high heels and walk over to the boy and tell him exactly what you told me. Tell him you'd love the chance to date him again and you hope he'll ask you. Then dance with your head on his shoulder.

To learn the knack of feeling comfortable with the opposite sex, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "How To Be Date Bait," inclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

The Eggplant Is a Tasty Import

Italians Brought It Here and It Can Be Served in Many Tasty Variations

By Hoyt Alden

TODAY'S LESSON is on the eggplant, a native of South America and so named because the original was white, egg-shaped and about the size of a hen's egg. It has been called a brother to the potato and a first cousin to the tomato. It traveled from South America to Spain. The Spaniards didn't care much for it, but the Italians went for it in a big way and it was they who developed the big purple vegetable you see in the supermarkets today.

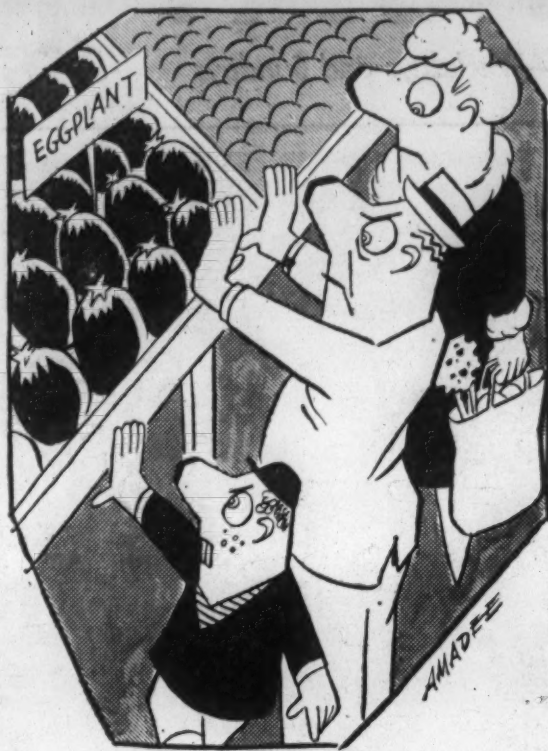

Italian immigrants brought it to this country, but even yet, generations later, Americans, like the Spanish, seem to have failed to appreciate its possibilities. However, in most European and Asiatic countries it is held in high regard. The French, who called it aubergine, have come up with some fine eggplant dishes, but some of the best come from the Near East. An excellent example is Iman Bayeldi, which has been described as an eggplant stuffed with all the vegetables you happen to have around, and then baked in olive oil.

AS YOU CAN GATHER from that, there are many variations. Here is one of them: Cut an eggplant lengthwise in six segments. Scoop out as much of the inside as possible. Salt the hollowed out sections both inside and out and set them aside. Now fry two chopped onions and a clove of garlic in olive oil together until golden brown. Then add a can of tomatoes and the chopped eggplant scooped from the shell. Simmer with a lid on until the eggplant is tender. Wash the sections of the eggplant shell and pile on the filling. Paint them with olive oil and cook them in a 350 degree oven for about an hour.

You can find recipes for stuffed eggplant in almost any cookbook. The filling is mixed up with almost everything—rice, onions, lamb, bread and tomatoes. If you just happen to like the flavor of eggplant, try aubergines au gratin as the French fix it.

Start by frying halved eggplants in deep fat until they're tender. Then scoop out the insides and mash them with salt and pepper to taste and plenty of butter. Then refill the skins, cover the tops with breadcrumbs and brown them under the broiler.

WE GOT STARTED on the subject of eggplant today by a letter from Mrs. Kent Costikyan Jr., of Tulsa, Okla., who wrote to tell us about aubergine caviare, which she ate in France, and for which she obtained the recipe. In France, she pointed out, it was served cold as an hors d'oeuvre, in Italy it was served hot as a side dish. And it is equally delicious either way. Start out by boiling or baking an eggplant. If baked, let it bake for an hour. While it's cooking, chop one large onion and one seeded green pepper very fine. Also chop one tomato.

Heat four tablespoons of olive oil in a large skillet and saute a thinly sliced zucchini (two if they're small), a clove of minced garlic, the chopped onion, the pepper and the tomato. Saute them until they're limp and tender, but not browned.

Then peel and chop the cooked eggplant very fine and add that to the skillet. Then flavor it with two tablespoons of dry red wine, a teaspoon of sugar, a fourth of a teaspoon of oregano and salt and pepper to taste. Mix well and then add half a can of tomato paste. Mix it again and let it simmer gently for 15 minutes. You can serve it hot as a side dish. Or, says Mrs. Costikyan, you can put it in the refrigerator and let it chill. Then when you have company put it in a bowl and surround it with crackers, rye bread and pumpernickel bread. Everybody raves about it, she reports, but no one has the faintest idea what it is.

MOVING FROM eggplant to spinach, if you're tired of spinach boiled or pureed, try this: Boil the spinach and chop it fairly fine. Drain it. Then beat in an egg to each two cups of spinach and the sprinkle in enough flour to make a thick batter. Drop this, a spoonful at a time onto a well greased (with butter) griddle and fry it brown on both sides.

Spinach and eggs can be a pleasant combination, but there are few things more dismaying than the average housewife's interpretation of this dish. What you usually encounter is a bowl of watery canned spinach right out of the can with some slices of hardboiled egg on top. By the time it reaches you the eggs have begun to soak up the green juice of the spinach and . . . well, why go on?

HERE, on the other hand, is the dish as it should be done. Cook enough fresh spinach to have eight heaping tablespoons after all the water has been pressed out. Not part of the water, all of it.

Now make a cream sauce like this: Put five tablespoons of butter in a saucepan. Melt it and put in four and a half tablespoons of flour. Blend them together over a very low flame. Then add three fourths of a cup of milk and three fourths of a cup of cream. Cook it very gently and very slowly, stirring all the time. A good way is to give it about 15 minutes over an asbestos mat.

Now cut four seven-minute eggs into quarters. Add the spinach to the sauce and as soon as both are good and hot, place it in a warm dish and top the spinach with the eggs and serve it up.

Or maybe you're like the little girl in the cartoon who said, "I still say it's spinach, and I still say the hell with it."

Or, as Groucho Marx once said, it would be a better world for the children if the parents had to eat all the spinach.

Contract Bridge

By B. Jay Becker

YOU RUN ACROSS all kinds of bidding systems in bridge, whether you stay in your own back yard or travel the world far and wide, the ingenuity of man knowing no bounds.

So, if you're baffled by the bidding sequence shown, particularly North's original pass, rest assured you are not alone. The deal was played and the bidding took place in the match between Italy and Sweden in the European championships in 1952.

Sitting North-South were the Italian pair of Franco and Giovanni, inventors of the Marmic system. According to their method of play—believe it or not—an opening bid in first or second position denied the normal values for an opening bid, while a pass in first or second position guaranteed the values for an opening bid.

Hence, North's pass practically assured South that his side had at least a game, and when North jumped to two notrump, probably a small slam.

When North raised three spades to four, South, who at this point could have had a pretty worthless hand (in the system), employed Blackwood. Learning from the response that North held three aces, South boldly contracted for seven.

This venture turned out all right when East showed up with the doubleton queen of hearts, and the vulnerable grand slam

North dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

4 ♠ Pass 4 NT Pass
5 ♠ Pass 7 ♣

Opening lead—three of spades.
was easily made for a score of 2210 points.

When the Swedish pair of Lilliehook and Anulf held the North-South cards, they also arrived at the grand slam, though by less sensational methods. The bidding was:

North East South West
1 NT Pass 3 ♠ Pass
4 ♠ Pass 4 NT Pass
5 ♠ Pass 5 NT Pass
6 ♠ Pass 7 ♣

Again 13 tricks were made, and the result was a tie. Both pairs arrived at an inferior grand slam contract, but luckily made it. About all that the deal proved is that there's more than one way to skin a cat.

Linoleum Rugs

An excellent and inexpensive covering for floors is felt base flooring often called "linoleum rugs or carpets." This material comes in sizes up to 12 feet by 15 feet in various patterns.

It can be applied to the floor without the need of any adhesive and provides many of the advantages of the more expensive floor coverings. It's great for people who rent and need a floor covering that is not permanently installed.

My Neighbor Says:

If the floor of an attic is insulated, it's not necessary to also insulate between the roof rafters. Just close off the attic as tightly as possible from the rest of the house so that warm air can't easily flow into it.

If you have an oil burner on your heater, keep some dry Portland cement handy to dry absorb any fuel oil that might get on the floor around the burner when the burner is serviced.

Vitamin Beauty

The first complete plan to provide vitamin nourishment that penetrates deep within the skin to restore and replace vital oils and moisture.

How Vitamin Beauty actually helps you

Doctors and skin scientists know the miracles that extra amounts of vitamins A, D, and E work in your skin. These vitamins penetrate deep within the skin and remain there, where they are needed, and bring it to new life.

VITAMIN A — your skin's most essential vitamin — fights dryness and flakiness. Even more — vitamin A can actually change the quality of the fundamental layers of your skin, restoring vital moisture, elasticity, and resilience.

VITAMIN D — its unique biologic stimulus gives your skin one of the most essential benefits of ultra-violet treatment, without the coarsening, drying effects of sunlight.

VITAMIN E — the miracle vitamin, found in young healthy skin, protects your complexion in two vital ways. Vitamin E helps your skin to use fully every molecule of vitamin A which is sealed into Vitamin Beauty. It also acts to help your complexion achieve your goal—glowing young skin health.

THIS IS THE VITAMIN BEAUTY PLAN

BUT BE THAT AS IT MAY, THE BRIDGE CLUB GALS ARRIVED RIGHT ON THE BUTTON—IN A CONVERTIBLE YET...

John Crosby How to Avoid Being An Idle Wastrel

NEW YORK, Feb. 13. "IT IS EASIER to get rich in the United States today than ever before," said my son triumphantly.

"Now where did you get such a silly idea," I inquired. "It says so right here in Look magazine." And he showed me.

"Go play in the snow! Very good for you!" "Practically everybody is rich except us, daddy. It says right here this man Jameson started an electronics company with $3000 and four years later he had $1,800,000. Why don't you do something like that?"

"Because I'm yatatating with you all day long! That's why," I snapped at him. "How can I get rich with you standing there yacking all day long. Why don't you go out and play and give me a chance to get rich."

Well, he's gone now. I suppose I'm expected to be rich by the time he gets back for lunch. Why is Look magazine putting ideas like that in the heads of innocent children? I picked up the magazine which has a gold cover this issue. "All About Money," it says on the cover. "How It's Made," "How It Grows," "How It's Spent," "Can We Afford to Be Rich?"

Can we afford to be rich?

How would I know? I know I can't afford to be poor because my creditors keep nipping at my heels. But, if I can't afford to be rich either, what can I afford?

This "all about" monkeyshines is the latest lunacy of the magazines and I wish they'd get over it. "All About Puerto Rico," "All About Detroit," "All About Labor." Then they give you 224 pages (with color prints) about something you don't like—the little girl and the penguins—want to know that much about. I think it was Life that started this nonsense.

"The Good Life" will be the subject for a whole Life issue and inside they tell you that 2000 correspondents and 4822 photographers scattered from Nome to Miami labored two years to bring you this monstrous issue, telling you how happy and affluent you are.

I opened Look magazine. "Frank Jameson," it said in black type easily accessible to all small children, "is living proof that in our society today a man who wants to can still get rich. Jameson has no advanced degrees and no unusual talents. He is bright but no ingenious..."

Hmm! Fine lot of malarkey to put into naive young heads. I turned the page: "How to pick a stockbroker. A real pro can make you a fortune. Here are some inside tips." How am I going to explain that to the children? Everybody's doing it. But me. I turned another page. "Self Made Women." "She started with $250. Fifteen years later, she had her first million."

It could ruin your whole day, a magazine like that. I can remember back when it was fashionable to hate the rich. Now we elect them President of the United States. Or Governor of New York. The magazines come out with whole issues devoted to telling us that the rich are really like you and me.

Just to restore my morale, I dug out an old copy of McClure's magazine that Ann Honeycutt gave me for Christmas, the March 1912 issue. The lead article's first sentence: "One of the most significant phases of the present railroad situation is the extent to which the children of Jay Gould are losing control of the family enterprises. Of the dozen railroad lines that make up what is commonly known as the Gould system, only one is now paying dividends."

Now, that's more like it!

"The Goulds are losing control of their ancestral domain because, like the Vanderbilts, they have attempted to do two incompatible things—live lives of idleness and luxury, and at the same time control great enterprises."

Well, I feel much better. I've avoided becoming an idle wastrel by the skin of my teeth. Believe me, it's not been easy.

New Products for Home

A NEW FINISH FOR FURNITURE: Amateurs now can give unpainted furniture and shelves a professional finish as easily as wiping off a kitchen table. That's the claim for a new wipe-on satin stain and finish kit. Available in 30 shades, the stain and finish are said to need no brushing, show no spots, leave no lap marks. Each kit contains a plastic glove; garnet paper for sanding if necessary; cloth applicators; coats for hard-to-reach spots; a container of satin stain; a container of satin finish; and steel wool for buffing, if desired, between coats. The wipe-on stain penetrates below the surface. The finish, which is also wiped on, creates a hard surface with a hand-rubbed effect.

SWEET AND ZIPPY AIR: One of the two new air purifier-plus units may increase your living comfort. The first is a compact, five-pound, inexpensive (about $40) portable device that filters room air and eliminates 90 per cent of the cigarette smoke, odors and smog, and a high percentage of airborne bacteria. It also emits a stream of negative ions into the filtered air—ions which some studies indicate have an invigorating effect... The second unit, also a portable, weighs 20 pounds, costs about $20 more, has a two-speed motor. Along with three separate filters which remove almost every speck of dust, pollen and smoke, and all odors—plus a negative ion emitter—there's an 18-inch ultraviolet lamp which kills germs.

PORTABLE CONVERTIBLE: New from West Germany, a novel convertible radio serves both as a pocket-size portable and full-voiced table model. It consists of an eight-transistor radio slightly larger than a cigarette package—along with a companion table-cabinet with self-contained speaker. To operate as a table model, you insert the transistor radio into the right hand side of the table cabinet. This action simultaneously cuts off the small personal speaker and activates the larger speaker within the cabinet. For personal use, you press a release button on the cabinet and out comes the little personal radio.

FOR FUN: New roller skates from France have unusual features. They come both in three and four-wheel models, have no clamps, can be worn even with sneakers. They're built so your feet go between, instead of above, the wheels, providing a lower center of gravity for better balance, easier skating, less hazard of spilling. The large hard-rubber wheels offer smoother riding on rough roads and blacktop. And for stop control, a front wheel brake goes into action whenever you raise a heel.

Marlon Brando Enjoys Anonymity in Tahiti

He's Making 'Mutiny on the Bounty' and People Leave Him Alone As He Wants; There's Time for Fun, Too

Associated Press columnist Bob Thomas went to the South Seas for a look at moviemaking in Tahiti, which MGM chose as location for a remake of the classic "Mutiny on the Bounty." The star, playing Fletcher Christian, is Marlon Brando. MGM took a chance that the rainy season would come late but before shooting could be finished the rains set in with such persistence the company decided to return to Hollywood for interiors, then go back to Tahiti in late spring. Nevertheless, Thomas found Brando enjoying island life. Here is his report on Brando on Tahiti and on his newest co-star, Tarita, a 19-year-old native of Bora Bora.

By Bob Thomas

Aboard H. M. S. Bounty, off Tahiti (AP)

MARLON BRANDO fastened a rubber band around his slightly graying locks to keep them from flying in the wind.

"What a bore," said the actor, his hair grown long for his role as Fletcher Christian in "Mutiny on the Bounty."

Brando leaned against the rigging of the majestic three-masted, anchored off Papeete under a leaden sky. A hundred film makers were waiting—at $23,000 a day—for sunshine that never came.

Except for his flapping hair, Brando seemed little concerned about the delay, nor did he appear happy that the film company would be returning to Hollywood early because of the rainy season.

On the first day of shooting 10 weeks ago, Brando remarked to director Carol Reed: "I'm sorry to see this day come. It just means one day sooner that we will be going back to the States."

Now he gazed at the Tahitian shore with its groves of curved-trunked cocoa palms and the green hills and purple peaks beyond. "I'll hate to leave," he said. "This is the first time in 10 years that I've been able to feel comfortable among people."

In Tahiti, Brando can walk the streets unnoticed. It's not because the people don't know who he is; many do. But Tahitians never bother their fellow man, and Brando has achieved an anonymity he hasn't known since he became a star.

He can find it nowhere else, he said, "except maybe in Moscow or Peking or any of the Iron Curtain cities." He hasn't been there yet.

Some may think it unusual for a man to be a movie star and want to remain anonymous. But then, as the world well knows, Brando is not the usual kind of star. Director Reed, who has an Englishman's restraint of expression, has said, "There is no more exciting, no greater actor in the world today." And he said it before a group of distinguished British actors appearing in "Mutiny."

Brando lives a few miles out of town in a thatched house, open to the elements like most dwellings on the island. The house is on the palm-lined shore of the lagoon surrounding Tahiti. Nearby is another house where lives Bob Haskins, Brando's friend since childhood and dialogue director for "Mutiny." There is another house for servants.

He mingles little with other movie makers on the location. That does not mean he is aloof. Before the film started, he opened his home to 200 of the film company and greeted each with geniality at the door. The party cost him $2000.

Brando's newest co-star, Tarita, hails from Bora Bora and couldn't care less about Hollywood.

Tarita is 19, lithe and lovely, and was picked from Polynesia to play Brando's sweetheart in "Mutiny." Before her selection, she could have asked: Who is Marlon Brando?

"I don't care much for the cinema," she explains. "That does not mean that she does not care much for Brando. He is a very kind man," she says, "and he is very helpful in teaching me how to act."

Does their friendship go any further than this? Not as yet. They had their first date recently, a dinner together at the Hotel Tahiti. She was asked if she would go out with him again.

He reads, "I could have financed a small picture company with the cost of bringing my books out here by air," he commented. What does he read? "A lot of Dylan Thomas lately. He was a real character. Also I've been reading some Nietzsche. I don't know much about philosophy, but he seems rare—a real, biting satire."

He reads much poetry aloud. Ashore, he will stray off from the film company and stroll down the beach, declaiming the poems with gestures. Or he may be found reading poetry in the rigging 85 feet above the deck of the Bounty.

He keeps up with world news by having the Sunday New York Times (30 cents) air mailed to him for $28 a copy. He is interested in news of the new Kennedy administration. He didn't campaign for the President, but favored him because he ran on the Democratic ticket.

It's not all work and study for Marlon. He is frequently seen in the local night spots, sometimes dancing spiritedly in bare feet. He is never at a loss for female companionship.

On New Year's eve, for example, he hired one of the island's rattlertrap busses and filled it with 15 of the native girls who dance in the movie. They circled the island singing Tahitian songs with great gaiety.

He goes skin diving and water skiing, but refrains from fishing; he doesn't believe in killing animals except when necessary. He has made great friends with

MARLON BRANDO and his co-star in "Mutiny on the Bounty," 19-year-old TARITA.

The answer required five minutes, during which she blushed, covered her mouth to hide her smiling and finally came up with the diplomatic answer: "If he asks me."

As you can gather, an interview with Tarita, conducted through an interpreter, does not produce a freshet of quotes. Fact is, she doesn't know what an interview is. Nor does she know what Hollywood is all about. But she's going there to finish the movie and wants to see America.

Tarita's own home town is on an idyllic isle surrounded by a crystal clear lagoon and little touched by white man's civilization. Her father once made starch from tree roots but now is retired, a normal condition for all ages in the Society Islands.

Tarita advanced through the equivalent of the ninth grade, studying French history, geography and mathematics, left school to live with a married sister in Papeete. Her great passion was to dance, and that was to be fateful in her future.

MGM had searched widely for a girl to play Maimie, the love of Fletcher Christian. Many actresses were considered in Hollywood, but Brando held out for a native girl. His contract gave him approval of his leading lady.

Tahiti was scoured for likely prospects and the list was narrowed to 15. Tarita not among them. The 15 were put in a drama class, and Brando method-acted with each of them. None seemed to qualify.

Time was getting short. The company was shooting a festival scene with 100 dancers; one was supposed to be Maimie, who would entice Mr. Christian. During rehearsals, a single dancer stood out among the others as being particularly sinuous and beautiful. She was chosen: Tarita.

She is rather tall, with a face Gauguin could have painted: broad cheeks, dark eyes, wide, full mouth and long black hair. Her waist is tiny but other dimensions ample. She speaks no English.

Brando himself is friendly but not chummy with the largely English cast for the Bounty saga. Aboard ship he occasionally plays chess with Tim Seeley, who has the part created by Franchot Tone. But much of the time he is closeted in his room below deck.

He reads, "I could have financed a small picture company with the cost of bringing my books out here by air," he commented. What does he read? "A lot of Dylan Thomas lately. He was a real character. Also I've been reading some Nietzsche. I don't know much about philosophy, but he seems rare—a real, biting satire."

He goes skin diving and water skiing, but refrains from fishing; he doesn't believe in killing animals except when necessary. He has made great friends with Carlos Palacci, Chilean consul and a former official with the League of Nations and United Nations. An internationalist, Brando has sat talking with his elderly friend far into the night and has ended sleeping on the consul's floor rather than go home.

Theoretically, Brando is only a paid actor on the picture. In practice, it works otherwise. He is consulted on all policy matters, and his desires are always carried out. When he wants certain changes made in the script, they are made. This does not always set too well with the other actors, the British especially.

Brando in Tahiti is different from the guarded, suspicious star in Hollywood. Here he will strip down and race into the surf to ride waves with natives, other "Mutiny" workers and a visiting reporter. He is a better actor than wave rider.

This picture is Brando's first remake, and I asked him if he minded following in Clark Gable's footsteps. The answer: Not a bit.

"I saw the old picture recently," he said. "It's a bore. Nobody remembers Gable in it. People remember him for other films, like 'Gone With Wind.' The actor people remember in 'Mutiny on the Bounty' is Charles Laughton. He moved right in and took over."

Why did Brando undertake the film?

"Because the theme of the story intrigued me," he said. "Here was a group of men who had one great moment of glory, when they rose and conquered tyranny."

"Then they had the greatest opportunity to achieve happiness. They went to a place (Pitcairn's island) where the natives were friendly, where living was incredibly easy. And what happened? Within two years they were dead. They had killed each other."

"It seemed to me that this presented a microcosm of man's situation throughout history: The struggle of good vs. evil, of the urge to create and the urge to destroy. If man cannot find happiness on an island paradise, where can he find it?"

For someone with Brando's yen for privacy, that's quite a question. The talk turned to the recent, highly publicized marital split of one of his former co-stars.

"Imagine—talking about their personal affairs for print!" he said wonderingly. "These are intimate matters that concern themselves only, and yet they are sharing them with the world."

"I can't understand it. Nor can I understand how Tennessee Williams can go on Mike Wallace's TV show and tell everything about himself. Here is an intelligent, sensitive man who chooses to tell his own problems to the world. I wish someone would tell me why."

Impossible. Marlon barely tolerated publicity in the days when he was having fun playing the motorcycle-riding character. He passed that stage and became more serious about life in general. He grew bitter about press coverage of his "wrangles with ex-wife Anna Kashfi. Now he has stringent rules.

"I won't answer any personal questions and I won't read anything about myself," he said. "If a friend starts to read something about me, I stop him. It makes me physically ill."

His special hates are gossip columns, fan magazines and the London press. He won't speak to any of the former. His contract reads that studios cannot issue photos of him in his films to any movie magazines. When a London correspondent came to Tahiti to cover the film location, Brando wouldn't talk to him.

Knowing his dislike for the spotlight, you can understand why Brando likes Tahiti. Tahiti also likes him.

Miss Jody Jackes, J. S. Ross Engaged

By Margaret Allen Ruhf

AT A CAREFULLY PLANNED surprise cocktail party Saturday night at Bellerive Country Club, announcement was made of the engagement of Miss Jody Ann Jackes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Franklin Jackes, and John Spreck Ross.

Invitations were sent by Miss Jackes and three friends, Miss Alice Abel, Miss Nancy Baker and Miss Susan Herbst, who had been told of the engagement. The news was withheld from the Sunday newspapers for fear of a premature announcement.

As the 50 guests arrived at 7 o'clock, a series of revolving images of Miss Jackes and her fiancé, with appropriate captions, was magnified by a tell-a-story-sequence projector set up outside the clubhouse. In the attractive Bermuda room, where the party was held, Valentine decorations prevailed.

The wedding will take place in June at Christ the King Church.

Miss Jackes, a graduate of John Burroughs School and Connecticut College, New London, is studying at Washington University for a master's degree in economics. In 1957 she made her debut at a Venetian ball, on the grounds of the Joseph Pfeiffer estate, with four friends—Mrs. Paul V. Maher Jr. (Ruth Gissy); Mrs. Peter D. Muckerman (Margaret Pfeiffer); Mrs. Joseph P. Watson (Sally Heffernan) and Miss Mary Ann Placio. Miss Jackes was a maid of honor at the 1957 Veiled Prophet ball.

Sister of Mrs. Thomas O. Mulvihill (Nancy Jackes), the bride-elect is a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Robt. Jackes and Mr. and Mrs. Timothy J. Murphy, none of them living.

Mr. Ross is the son of Mrs. Jules Ross, 10 Rollore lane, Town and Country, and the late Mr. Ross. A graduate of Barat Hall and John Burroughs School, he studied for two years at Vanderbilt University and two years at Washington University where he will receive a degree in August. He belongs to Phi Delta Theta fraternity and the Bachelor Club. His sister is Mrs. James Burst (Nora Louis Ross).

Programs at Junior League.

TWO PROGRAMS are planned for February at the Junior League, both to take place after 12:30 o'clock luncheons.

The first program will be given tomorrow. Richard Trampe of the Foulke Fur Company will speak on "Antique Furs and Period Costumes." After his talk, Junior League members will model antique furs and show new designs in sealskin furs. Mrs. Robert B. Phillips will be commentator for the fashion show. Models will be Mrs. James C. Martha Carr's

OPINION

Unmarried Pair With 4 Children.

Dear Martha Carr:
I WOULD LIKE some advice for a friend. I told her I would write you. She has lived with a man for the last 10 years. She has four children by him. The oldest one is almost nine. You see he had orders to go overseas. They took their blood tests but the tests weren't returned in three days so they had to come home. He went overseas and was gone for two years and three months fighting for his country. When he got back they started living as man and wife and she became pregnant.

One thing led to another and they never made it to the altar. Now can you tell me if a woman lives with a man for all these years, carries his name, has four children who also carry his name and his insurance is made out to her, can she collect it? If he dies, will she be able to draw his social security? Can she draw state aid for dependent children if they part? Does she have the same rights as a wife? I was told you had to have a marriage license before you could collect insurance on a man. She doesn't want to go to a lawyer as everyone thinks she is married. She is all mixed up. ILLINOIS READER.

Never mind about collecting insurance or social security. Tell your friend to take her husband firmly by the nape of the neck and drag him, if necessary, to the marriage license bureau and from there to a minister who will tie a good, firm, everlasting marriage knot. Her four children will then be legitimized and she won't have to worry about collecting insurance or social security as a common-law wife.

If her morals are so shabby that she could live with this man all these years without being married to him there's probably not much use bringing up the moral issue. But she must have a mother's love for these children and certainly they deserve a clear right to their father's name. If all else fails, tell her that to make dead certain that she gets every dollar and cent coming to her a marriage certificate is her best bet. A situation like this is incredible in this day and age.

Dear Martha:
MY HUSBAND always eats his bacon with his fingers. It makes me cringe. Shouldn't he use a fork?
DISGUSTED WIFE.

Bacon should be picked up with the fingers only when it is so crisp it crumbles under a fork.

Dear Martha:
MY HUSBAND and I do not agree on all things, or perhaps I should say many things. But he never gives in gracefully. When I win the argument he always says, "Okay, so you're right as usual." It makes me feel that I haven't really won and he's only giving in because he's tired of arguing. How can I get him to say so when I win? DETERMINED.

Look out for trouble. You're goading this man too far. One of these days he'll clam up and go his own way and he won't care two hoots whether you like it or not. His "Okay, so you're right as usual" is a signal you should recognize as smoldering resentment. Beware the day he bolts over and leaves you alone in your self-righteous little world.

Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for Martha's "St. Patrick's Party" leaflet.

Joseph G. Molner, M.D. Unhealthy Bones

DEAR DR. MOLNER: Can you tell me something about osteoporosis?
MRS. C.M.C.

We think of our bones as being hard and inert. This is far from true. Bones, like any other part of the body, can undergo changes. They contain calcium, an inner substance made up of protein, and between that and the hard outer surface is fat or marrow.

Healthy bones depend on many factors, the chief ones being good nutrition, use of the bones (exercise) and certain glandular factors.

Osteoporosis is a thinning of the hard part of the bone. Several causes may be responsible. One is disuse. Prolonged bed rest, or being in a cast for a long time, can cause this thinning or softening. Malnutrition can do the same thing. So can lack of Vitamin C or an excessive intake of Vitamins A and D. Lack of hormones is a quite common cause in women. Usually such cases take about 10 years to develop.

Symptoms of osteoporosis include such things as back pain or back ache at night, a tendency toward poor posture and stooping or round-shouldered appearance; tenderness in the bones; and, of course, bones breaking under circumstances which should cause only relatively slight injury.

Such fractures are the most serious consequence of osteoporosis. It is not cancerous in nature.

In a severe case, your doctor will warn you to be careful of bumps, falls, undue strain on bones, etc. In the many mild cases it is necessary to strengthen the bones. Treatment consists essentially of replacement of hormones in the system, a diet rich in Vitamin C (citrus fruit and juices, and Vitamin C tablets if required) and exercise.

Walking is an excellent form of exercise for this trouble. Simple pain-killers, such as aspirin, will help the aches. Osteoporosis doesn't come on suddenly, and improvement is slow. Don't expect rapid correction.

"Don't Quit Because of Arthritis" is the title of my leaflet designed to help all who suffer the aches and pains of arthritis. For a copy write to Dr. Molner in care of the Post-Dispatch, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and five cents in coin to cover cost of handling. Dr. Molner is always happy to hear from his readers, but he regrets that he cannot answer individual letters due to the great number received daily. Whenever possible he uses readers' questions in his column.

MY HUSBAND'S HAIR is drier than mine, but we both have the disadvantage of having to shampoo in hard water. What can we use to soften our hair and maybe get a little gloss?
M. AND Y.

Try catching rain water for your shampoos. If you can't, use any of the many advertised shampoos which will really clean your hair. Even with those, be sure to do lots of rinsing. Then dry your hair by hand with a lintless towel, apply a little cosmetic oil on your scalp, and then brush. Use the oil every day and you will acquire a gloss.

WHICH FUR is most flattering to a woman over sixty? I am always overweight and always trying to reduce. I must have a fur coat as I live in a very cold place. I go to many club affairs and the coat is for dress.
O.W.

You could have a soft, smooth cloth coat lined in fur. This would make you look slimmer and yet be warm. Otherwise the flat furs are the most flattering.

"You CAN Get Better Grades" 4 Steps in Writing Themes

By Leslie J. Nason, Ed.D., with Harry Karns

EIGHTH OF A SERIES

THE ABILITY to organize and express thoughts clearly and concisely is one of the greatest assets a student can possess.

As you go up the ladder in school, you will be asked more and more often to write themes, reports and essays. Your grades in some courses will depend almost entirely on how well you have written your reports.

It is unfortunate that many students approach the act of writing with a sense of awe. You do not have to be a literary genius to write a competent paper. In fact, it is better to get rid of the idea that "inspiration" is needed.

Simply go about it as you would any other project. Decide what has to be done and figure out the most logical way to do it.

Here are some steps that will help you in mapping your written reports:

1. Make sure you understand exactly what the teacher expects you to write about.

If you are not sure, write a sentence stating what you believe the subject to be, and show it to the instructor.

Understanding of the topic can save you much fretting and many hours of work. You may write the finest paper in the world, but if it is not on the topic assigned, you are going to be in trouble.

2. Make a list of places to look for material for the report.

Most student research is done in libraries. Your research will be made easier and more effective if you ask the teacher or librarian how to use encyclopedias, the New York Times index, the Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature and the library card file system itself.

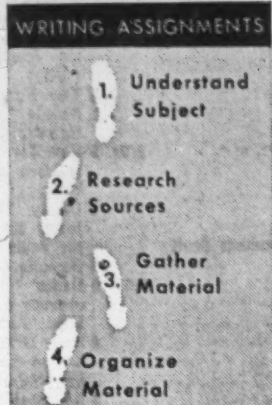

As you consult such sources, make a list of the books, magazines, newspapers and pamphlets which offer some promise of giving the information you want. Behind each reference, write down the page number.

3. Now start gathering the information from these sources.

Make notes in your own words: don't just copy what the writer has written, unless, of course, you intend to quote him word for word. Credit the source.

Don't copy material down in wholesale lots. Be selective. Ask yourself: "Does this actually pertain to the subject?"

This doesn't mean you should accumulate only a few notes. Gather plenty of material that you can use. It is better to have some facts and ideas left over than to have too few.

When you find that you have run out of things to say and yet have not written a substantial paper, this is the signal to go back and do more research. Don't try to "bluff" it out. If your teacher is a good editor of reports, he'll detect your effort to pad.

4. After gathering your material, organize it.

That is, make an outline. Decide which ideas are the big ideas, and which ideas are the smaller, supporting ideas. Decide the order in which these ideas should appear in the finished product.

The extent to which you use these suggestions will be governed, of course, by the nature and the length of the paper you are asked to write. Normally, a one-page theme will not require the research required for a four-page report.

If your assignment is a lengthy term paper, you will want to consult one of the many fine books that have been written to guide you in that kind of project.

Of the four steps described above, the one most likely to spell success or failure for your paper is Number 4.

If you have never learned to make an outline, you should take time out right now to learn how.

First, open a book to a brief chapter. The first paragraph or so, perhaps even the first sentence, will contain a statement of what the chapter is about. Write Roman numeral I on the top line of a sheet of paper, and copy that sentence behind it.

Second, find the main ideas or items of information in the remainder of the chapter which explain or support statement number I. Place them under I in their proper order as statements A, B, C, D and so forth.

Let us use a simple example. A book on guinea pigs might contain a chapter which opens with the statement that guinea pigs make excellent pets. The chapter also explains that guinea pigs are clean animals, that they are strong and rarely get sick, and that they whistle at their masters when they want carrots.

These facts would fall into the following pattern:

I. Guinea pigs are easy to care for and make interesting pets.

A. They are clean.
B. They are strong and rarely get sick.
C. They whistle for food.

Usually, the pattern of a piece of writing is more complex. But with patience you can figure out that pattern if you start with these keys: One, find the biggest idea. Two, find the supporting ideas and facts.

After you have practiced outlining material that is already written, reverse the process. Write down a list of observations, thoughts and facts about a subject with which you are familiar. Now take another sheet of paper and rearrange this material in a logical, sensible order.

You will get from this a sense of harmony and rightness which will give you enthusiasm and confidence when you start the actual writing of your report.

Uncle Ray's Column

The Coming Eclipse

The fifth grade of Silver Spring School, Madison, Wis., is awarded a set of the World Book Encyclopedia by Uncle Ray. Teachers of the fourth through twelfth grade classes may ask their pupils to submit questions for possible awards of a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia. Select the best five questions on science, history or geography and send to Uncle Ray in care of the Post-Dispatch.

By Ramon Coffman

A TOTAL ECLIPSE of the sun will be observed by people in parts of Europe and Asia on Wednesday, the fifteenth of this month.

Q. Where will the path of darkness run?

A. Through France and northern Italy, then across Yugoslavia, the Balkans and a section of Russia. People in parts of Siberia (which makes up much of Russia-in-Asia) will see the big event.

Q. Why does the moon fall to provide a total eclipse for people all over the earth?

A. To do that, the moon would need to be much larger, also closer to the surface of the earth.

It is better to have things as they are now. The moon seems to be large enough, and who would want to have it only a thousand miles overhead? There would be worry about the moon falling on us; in fact, disaster would take place in a hurry if the moon came to a point only a thousand miles above the ground.

Q. Will North America have total eclipses of the sun in the next decade?

A. Yes. There will be total solar eclipses on this continent, and on other continents as well. I remember a total eclipse I observed 36 years ago. The path of darkness cut through the Great Lakes area, and included a section of southern Ontario. It also cut through the state of New York.

It was a cold day in January, and I felt about frozen, but the event was so exciting that I almost forgot the coldness for a few minutes.

For SCIENCE section of your scrapbook.
